STANDARD OIL of Indiana believes in flying machines, has a big one, all metal, with three engines, built by Ford, and big oil men, not little ones, use it. A recent Standard Oil "load" flying into Chicago from Detroit included Colonel Robert W. Stewart, chairman of the board of directors; Allen Jackson, one of the vice-presidents; E. J. Bullock, another vice-president; R. E. Humphries, a director, and Norman R. Grimshaw, assistant general manager. Evidently Standard Oil believes it has a safe plane.

LINDBERGH'S description of his flight suggests a mountain climber's experience: "I struck clouds and decided to try to get over them. After a while I succeeded at a height of 10,000 feet. . . . I went under some clouds and over others. There was sleet in all of these

WHITE PLANE REPORTED IN TOW OF SCHOONER

De Pinedo's plane was sighted shortly after noontime yesterday at a point 360 miles northwest of the Azores, his first objective on his homeward flight. No definite word of his whereabouts has been received, but Lloyd's in London has a report of a schooner seen towing a white plane at a spot 200 to 300 miles southwest of the islands. It was not stated the plane was De Pinedo's.

CRASH WINDOWS TO SEE 'LUCKY LINDY' IN PARIS

Paris, May 24 (A.P.).—Windows were smashed in by the dense crowds that came today to catch a glimpse of Captain Lindbergh, air hero, as he entered the Hotel Ambassador for a luncheon of the American Club.

When word of this came to Percy Peixoto, president of the club, the took Captain Lindbergh and Ambassador Myron T. Herrick to the balcony, where Captain Lindbergh waved the French flag.

Following the luncheon Captain Lindbergh had his hands kissed in adulation by at least 100 cooks and scullery boys.

They touched him as he passed with something of hero worship, and it was no staged proceeding.

There was no ceremonial applause to give the cue. It was a spontaneous acclamation as the American airman, hemmed in by the crowds inside the hotel, had to be taken

RAIN 18 OUT OF 24 MAY DAYS AND MORE COMING

Rain is the official prediction of the local Weather Bureau for the next thirty-six hours, based on an extensive and energetic storm area covering the country from the Atlantic to the Rockies. Offsetting somewhat the dire dictum of rain is the confident hope expressed by the weather man that the mercury will climb tomorrow.

It has now rained eighteen of the twenty-four days this month.

DOANE NOW SUES WIFE AND NAMES C. G. TATE

Naming Charles G. Tate, Brookline engineer and old friend of the Doane family, George B. Doane, defendant in a separation action brought several months ago by Mrs. Maude A. Doane, today brought counter-charges of misconduct against her.

All are well known in Brookline society, which has looked on agog since Mrs. Doane filed a suit against Mrs. Florence M. Densmore for $100,000, charging alienation of her husband's affections.

Doane's charges were made in a petition filed in Norfolk Probate Court. Other charges were impounded to screen them from public scrutiny.

In the petition Doane says that since his wife brought suit against him and Mrs. Densmore she herself "has been guilty of acts of misconduct which preclude her in law and in equity from maintaining the charges she makes in her suit."

Last January Mrs. Doane filed suit for separate support, naming Mrs. Densmore. Doane is director

ITALIAN ACE'S PLANE REPORTED IN TOW 150 MILES FROM AZORES

Buenos Aires, May 24 (A.P.).—Wireless advices from Lisbon to La Nacion say that Commander Francesco De Pinedo landed 150 miles from the Azores because of fog and that his machine is being towed to Horta.

Montreal, May 24 (I.N.S.).—Commander De Pinedo has been forced down at sea and his seaplane is being towed in by a schooner, according to a message received here today from the S. S. Providence. The Providence reported that De Pinedo's seaplane in tow was sighted 240 miles from Flores, the Azores.

London, May 24 (A.P.).—An airplane in tow of a schooner in the Atlantic not far from the Azores Islands was generally assumed today to be the plane of Commander De Pinedo, the Italian four-continent flier.

He left Trepassy, Newfoundland, early yesterday morning and was due to reach the Azores on the return flight to Italy last night, but so far as could be learned here today he had not yet reached the islands.

The report of the plane in tow came in a radio message from the steamer Oilfield. A government wireles message from the Aquitania read:

The Premier's announcement was made during a statement upon the recent police raids on the headquarters of the Soviet Trade Delegation and Arcos, Ltd., the private Russian trading organization in London.

These raids revealed that Arcos and the trade delegation have been habitually used as a clearing house for subversive correspondence, the Premier stated.

Fall River, May 24.—A second Snyder-Gray case developed here today with the arrest and arraignment of Mrs. Gertrude F. Gibbons and her sweetheart, Antonio DaSilva, both charged with the murder of the woman's husband, Theodore R. Gibbons.

The body of Gibbons was found, head down, in a well on a Summer estate in East Swansea. The victim's head was battered in with some blunt instrument and police have found a short piece of gas pipe with which it is believed the crime was committed. The woman and her sweetheart pleaded not guilty when arraigned.

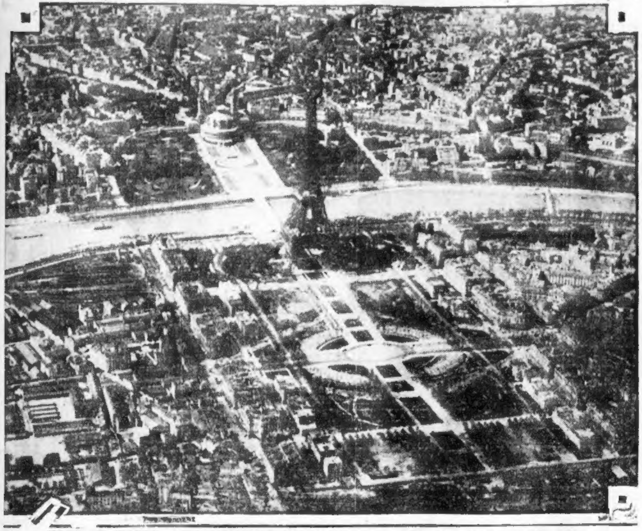
TROOPS GUARD LINDBERGH FROM ADMIRING MOBS IN FRANCE



THIS IS PARIS AS LINDBERGH WANTS TO SEE IT FROM THE AIR

Prominent on the south bank of the Seine is the Eiffel Tower, and directly across the river is the Grand Palais, with the Champs Elysees stretching beyond. This section is near La Cite, the most ancient part in Paris, dating back before Roman days. "Lindy" saw "Paris by night" when he arrived, but now he wants to get an eyeful by day. He'll look it over from his plane.

'AS MAIL FLIER

This is a picture of Captain Lindbergh, taken more than a year ago at the time he entered the air mail service as a pilot. Notice the lieutenant's uniform. —Acme Photo

Outdoor wining and dining is the custom in the French metropolis except in the very coldest weather. The above group is typical of the many which greeted the eye of Captain Lindbergh when he took in the sights of Paris after resting from his remarkable record flight. In the U. S. any "toasting" like this would have to be done behind closed doors.

through the basement kitchens of the place to the front entrance.

GUARDED BY TROOPS.

The aviator was embarrassed. He blushed and he stammered, but submitted nevertheless as the most daring patted his back and touched his arms so that they might say, "I touched Lindbergh."

"Midinettes," or shop girls, from all the dressmaking and millinery establishments in the centre of Paris, massed on the opposide side of the street from the hotel, were less favored than the cooks and scullery boys, having to content themselves with throwing Lindbergh kisses across the street when he appeared on the balcony.

Lindbergh showed that he was especially pleased by the demonstration, but as he stepped back through the window he heaved a sigh of relief as though to say, "Well, this sort of thing is througn with."

He had only reached his seat in the banquet hall, however, when a wave of applause, beginning at the entrance, rolled through and broke upon the speaker's table, with General Gouraud, military governor of Paris, following it.

SALUTED BY WAR HERO.

The mutilated hero of Gallipoli hurriedly limped over to where the aviator sat and brought a blush deeper than all the rest by clasping him in his remaining arm and kissing him on both cheeks.

Ambassador Herrick who presided at the luncheon proposed that Lindbergh be made chairman of a committee of sportsmen to settle the world's political troubles, because, he said, "Sportsmen fly so high above international tangles, with disregard for national boundaries and obstacles."

M. P. Peirotto, president of the club, and Theodore Rousseau, vice-president, sat at Ambassador Herrick's left, and Lindbergh, General Gouraud and the American Consul General, Alphonse Gaulin, on his right.

Two detachments of Republican Guards as well as a strong force of police were required to keep the Boulevard Haussmann open for traffic while Lindbergh was being entertained at the club.

The luncheon hall was so packed that the guests had to sit in closer quarters than did Lindbergh in the little wicker seat of his airplane during the long flight from New York to Paris.

The hallways and reception rooms were crowded with people not lucky enough to get tickets to the luncheon, but glad enough to get a glimpse of the hero as he passed.

Masons, carpenters and laborers working on buildings under construction on the opposite side of the new boulevard laid down their tools and crowded to the scaffoldings to see Lindbergh as he arrived.

Lindbergh got a taste of home cooking in the course of the luncheon, which was decidedly international in flavor. Vermont sausages were sandwiched in between Russian eggs, French potatoes and a new ice cream called "Bombe Glacee Lindbergh." Another dish was "Filet de Barbue a l'Americaine."

WORKERS CHEER "LINDY."

The masons and other workers from the club clamored so loudly and persistently for Lindbergh that he finally interrupted his lunch and appeared on the balcony.

The workers cheered him and then reluctantly went back to their labors but each one kept an eye on the club so as not to miss another glimpse of the aviator when he should leave.

During the luncheon Lindbergh made his second Paris speech. It was even a greater success than his first, given last night, although he stuck to the same simple style.

After holding the guests spellbound for ten minutes with a most modest description of his New York-Paris flight, he concluded: "I hope I haven't kept you too long," and sat down amid a terrific round of applause.

SHOWER OF CLOTHING.

After having to call on the President of France in a borrowed suit yesterday, Captain Lindbergh awoke this morning to find so many clothes ready for him that he had a hard time making a choice.

Evidently his hurried visit to the tailor yesterday morning had rapid but effective results.

"When I'm all dressed up in these things I'll outdo Berry Wall," Lindbergh remarked, referring to the famous cotillion leader once known as the Beau Brummell of New York.

Lindbergh slept late and this morning was as fresh as a daisy and smiling his famous "Lucky Lindbergh smile" when he faced the first batch of the day's long list of callers.

One of the earliest was Colonel Clifford B. Harmon, president of the International League of Aviators, accompanied by a reception committee from the Paris chapter of the league.

They came to present their formal felicitations, scheduled for Saturday night, but postponed when Lindbergh was lost in the huge crowd at Le Bourget.

Lindbergh recalled that Colonel

DE PINEDO'S 4-CONTINENT TOUR

TEXAS HANGAR HOODOO FOR ITS OCCUPANTS

San Antonio, Tex., May 24 (A.P.). —With the destruction of the non-rigid army dirigible TC-10-243 as she attempted to take off from Brooks Field, the huge hangar built for the ill-fated Italian airship Roma today had a record of disaster for virtually every lighter than air craft it ever housed.

The TC-10-243 tore herself nearly in two and crashed to the ground a mass of wreckage when a dragging cable caught in a steel runway used to anchor dirigibles. None of the crew of seven was injured.

While the TC-10-243 cost about $25,000, recovery of the engines and instruments will reduce the loss materially. Destruction of the ship was the first mishap incident to the maneuvers for which more than 200 airplanes were mobilized and used in all forms of day and night flights.

COMB SEA FOR PINEDO PLANE

41.06, longiture 33.39, on May 23 23:30 Greenwich mean time (11:30 p. m.), sighted a three-masted schooner towing airplane, steering east. Hailed schooner, but owing to darkness, couldn't get any details from her. She continued on course; did not answer Morse lamp signals. Plane believed to have twin engines, single wing, appeared to have tricolor on rudder."

The position given in this message would indicate that if the plane in tow is that of De Pinedo he got far out of his course, the position being considerably to the southwest of the Azores.

The message from the Oilfield was received at about the time a dispatch came from Horta, capital of Fayal, one of the Azores group, revealing that nothing had been heard of the flier and his two companions.

SEA CALM, IS REPORT.

This dispatch said the authorities were anxious and had caused a search to be made around the coasts of the islands, but without success. The weather was rainy, although the sea was calm, giving reason to believe that if obliged to alight on the sea, the aviators would not necessarily be in danger.

Last night a report came to London that a large white plane had been sighted at a point roughly 360 miles from the Azores, and it was believed this was the Italian plane.

While the "tricolor on rudder" gave rise to conjecture that the towed plane might be the missing Nungesser-Coli trans-Atlantic plane, aeronautic circles pointed out that the section of the ocean in question was far removed from the route taken by the French fliers. The French colors are red, white and blue; the Italian red, white and green.

Rome, May 24 (A.P.)—Premier Mussolini remained awake all night, awaiting news of Commander De Pinedo. He was in touch telephonically with all sources of possible information every half hour until after 6 o'clock this morning.

News from London that a machine, possibly De Pinedo's, had been sighted towed by a schooner in the vicinity of the Azores, was communicated to him shortly after 10 a. m., when he was preparing to participate in the celebration of the twelfth anniversary of Italy's entry into the World War.

A communique issued by the Italian Ministry of Aeronautics today says:

"Commander De Pinedo should have arrived at the Azores during the night. His failure to arrive causes the supposition of a forced landing in the ocean, due perhaps to low visibility at the Azores last evening or an accident to the motor of the machine.

Premier Mussolini this morning sent radio messages ordering all Italian ships near De Pinedo's route to search for him. The Atlantic is calm.

The communique was held up until nearly noon so as not to hamper the enthusiasm of today's celebration of the twelfth anniversary of Italy's entry into the World War with a sham battle. Nearly 50 scout and bombing planes dropped bombs and anti-aircraft batteries answered from the hills surrounding the city.

Combined assets of the two concerns approximate $2,000,000. About 400 will work in the Attleboro plant, which is to be devoted to the manufacture of metal goods, principally automobile parts and accessories.

BAIL FOR DEATH SUSPECTS

in Municipal Court. DaSilva then asked for a continuance of the case and Judge Hennessey set June 11 as the date for the hearing.

The man and woman were locked up in the Fall River jail where they will be held without bail.

In addition to the piece of gas pipe, which authorities say is splattered with blood, the police also have a bloodstained wooden club which was picked up near the well.

The authorities admit the evidence against Mrs. Gibbons and her sweetheart is largely circumstantial.

"The evidence we have in our possession," said District Attorney William C. Crossley, "is largely circumstantial. There is reason to believe there was jealousy on the part of the man and a desire by Mrs. Gibbons to rid her of her husband."

For a long time the man was held only as a suspect, but after an all-night grilling the police were satisfied that the charge of murder could be placed against him, as well as the woman.

Mrs. Gibbons and Da Silva were arrested and found guilty of misconduct, according to the findings of the police, and later Gibbons secured a verdict in a suit for alienation of his wife's affections which he brought against Da Silva.

The fury of the woman and Da Silva because of the winning of this suit is the motive of the murder, in the opinion of the police.

The one point yet to be explained, according to investigators, is the constable's badge pinned beneath the lapel of Gibbons' coat. He is not a constable, and it was at first thought that he might have used this badge to represent himself as a police officer and secure money from bootleggers.

Automobile tracks made by a light car and leading to a point near the well are regarded by the police as of prime importance in the case. These tracks, after being photographed by the police, were covered over with boards and are being guarded to preserve them for future reference.

A battered hat with two cuts, corresponding to the wounds in the head of the murdered man, is another bit of important evidence. The hat was picked up near the well by Ulysses Bailey, a State ward, who lives with a family near the property where the body was found.

Another possible murder weapon was found at the bottom of the well when it was drained by the police, today. It is a short length of gas pipe which apparently had been in the water only a short time. It was taken to police station for examination.

The police theory is that Gibbons was beaten to death within a short distance of the place where his body was found and that his body was loaded into an automobile and carried to the well, where it was placed by the slayers.

It is believed Gibbons was either on his way to visit his five-year-old son, who lives with a family in Somerset, or was on his way back from such a visit when he was set upon.

The boy, Herman, has been shunted back and forth for months between the father and mother. Four weeks ago last Saturday Gibbons went to his sister, Mrs. Florence Marum, and borrowed $2. He explained that he wanted to visit his boy. This is the last time he was seen alive.

CRESSEY FOUND DRIVING BREAD DELIVERY

Working in Reading, Pa., as the driver of a bakery wagon, Nelson S. Cressey, former chief of police of Hyannis, was arrested by Federal prohibition agents and is now being held in the Reading jail awaiting extradition to Boston.

Cressey and 12 others were indicted by a Federal Grand Jury on charges of conspiracy in connection with rum-running on the Cape. Since the indictments, Federal agents have been scouring the country for the former chief. It was reported that when he fled from Massachusetts a young woman accompanied him.

When found by Prohibition Agent Herman Goldman, the former chief was living with a young woman, according to the agents, who said the couple were registered under the names of Mr. and Mrs. John French.

Cressey has a wife in Beverly, where he resided until two years ago, when he was appointed chief of the Hyannis force.

About six months ago Cressey quit his job. At that time there was considerable talk of his being connected with the so-called "Cape Rum Ring."

Agent Goldman returned to Boston today to get requisition papers.

MAY AND DECEMBER CAN'T LIVE IN LOVE

YOUNG HUSBAND CRUEL, SAYS WIFE, 65

Greenfield, May 24.—The May and December romance of Mrs. Estelle Le Tourneau, aged 65 and her 21-year-old chauffeur-husband, Herman, crashed on the rocks, today.

The elderly bride, who last October led her chauffeur in triumph to the altar, today filed divorce action, charging cruel and abusive treatment and gross and confirmed habits of intoxication.

The widow and the youth of Greenfield eloped last Fall and were married in New York State. They returned to the bride's palatial home at South Deerfield, but Cupid soon took his departure from the "love nest." Money matters arose. Then in March came the break and the youthful husband was reported to have fled to Canada.

Later he was found in Manchester, N. H., where he declared his wife expected him to act as a servant and he was "sick and tired of it all."

The couple have since lived apart and nothing more was heard of the unusual romance until the divorce action was filed today.

WOMAN DIES BY GAS IN LITTLE EVERETT STORE

A suicide for some mysterious cause, Mrs. Lucy H. Winslow, 45, was found dead today in the gas-filled back room of her little candy and variety store, No. 150 Bucknam street, Everett.

Edward O'Mara, driver of a Bond Bread truck, made the discovery. He was delivering bread at the shop when he smelled gas. Tracing the odor, he reached the rear of the shop and climbing up peered over a transom.

The woman's form was stretched on a cot, and when O'Mara, with the aid of neighbors, succeeded in forcing the door, she was found to be dead. Three gas cocks were turned on full, and when Medical Examiner Thomas M. Durell arrived, he pronounced the case one of suicide.

Police found $50 in the cash drawer of the store and bank books showing deposits of more than $2,000. There was also a letter indicating she intended putting the store up at auction, and a newspaper clipping detailing her securing of a legal separation from Waltel G. Winslow, whom she married in October, 1914. Desertion was given as grounds.

According to the police, Mrs. Winslow once operated similar shops in Newport, N. H., and Providence, and has a sister living in Lynn.

TENANTS FLEE $15,000 FIRE IN BRIGHTON

A spectacular two-alarm apartment house fire threw the Aberdeen section of Brighton into an uproar early today, causing fifteen occupants to flee in night attire, three small children being carried to safety by their parents. Damage was estimated at $15,000.

The scene of the fire was a three-story dwelling at No. 67 Nottinghill road. Situated on the side of a 75-foot hill, the flames attracted hundreds of motorists, who clogged Commonwealth avenue for over an hour.

The fire started in the basement, raced up the rear of the house and then mushroomed down to the second floor. Choking smoke awoke the occupants at about the moment the fire was discovered by Donald A. Gardner, a Boston Elevated conductor, whose car was passing on Commonwealth avenue. He shouted an alarm. Walter Grace of No. 51 Monastery road, Brighton, raced into the burning house to arouse the occupants.

Sergeant Hartigan and Patrolmen Brassil, McGrath and Skeehan, after learning that occupants of the burning building were safe, ordered occupants of neighboring apartment houses to leave, in the belief the flames would spread.

CHURCH PLANS EXPOSURE OF ROADHOUSES

The "road-house problem," which has arisen with the advent of the automobile and which has caused much alar mamong the social workers of the country, is to be "exposed" in a pamphlet to be published by the Unitarian Church.

This was decided today at a meeting of the American Unitarian Association, the corporate organization of the denomination, which is in session in Boston in connection with Anniversary Week, which has brought laymen and clergy to the Hub from all parts of the United States, Canada and England.

The pamphlet will be issued by a new department in the church organization—a department of social relations. This department will carry on the work of the Social Service Council of the church and the Fellowship for Social Justice.

Professor Robert C. Dexter of Skidmore College will head the new department and will have charge of th preparation of the "road-house" pamphlet.

SEEK TO TAKE WILLETT CASE TO U. S. COURT

First legal steps were taken today to carry the $10,000,000 Willett-Sears case to the Supreme Court of the United States.

Counsel for George F. Willett, who won a $10,000,000 verdict in Dedham Court against Robert F. Herrick and a group of Boston bankers, only to have the verdict set aside by the Massachusetts Supreme Court, appeared before the Supreme Court, in an effort to have the case carried to Washington.

Attorney Boyd B. Jones, who represented Mr. Willett, presented a motion to the Supreme Court that the Superior Court be ordered to place in the records of the famous case the fact that a Federal issue had been raised.

The motion was vigorously opposed by Attorney George L. Mayberry, representing Mr. Herrick and the other defendants in the case.

Jones declared that on the day following the action of the Supreme Court in refusing a re-hearing in the case, the defendants, without notice, had Judge McLaughlin in the Superior Court at Dedham, order judgment for the defendants. This, according to Jones, deprived the plaintiffs of an opportunity to have it appear on record that they desired to take the case to the Supreme Court of the United States.

BRITAIN BREAKS WITH RUSSIA OVER RAID

many months the activities of "armed agents" seeking to obtain confidential documents relating to the British armed forces, and inquiry showed these agents were working in behalf of the Soviet government, the Premier said.

Evidence has been uncovered that one stolen document was reproduced by a photostatic process in the Soviet House, the premier said, and a British subject employed in the air force has been convicted of stealing two military documents. This British subject was imprisoned after the stolen papers had been recovered from him.

EXTENDED TO AMERICA.

"Evidence is in the hands of the authorities," said Baldwin, "which proves that both military espionage and subversive activities throughout Great Britain, North and South America, were directed and carried out from Soviet House."

The police, the premier said, discovered a photostatic room in Soviet House, occupied by a clerk "known to be intimately concerned in the activities of secret agents. This photstatic room answered exactly to the description previously given the police.

The Cabinet will make no representations to the Soviet government in ending relations. The British trade delegation and the British diplomatic mission will merely be withdrawn from Moscow.

ORDERS FOR U. S. REDS.

The Premier said the Soviets could not avoid responsibility for the documents which have been found. One letter which was seized, the Premier declared, contained instructions to American Communists for dissemination of Communist propaganda and discussed the industrial affairs of the United States.

A number of sealed envelopes, addressed to well-kknown Communists in Great Britain and America, were found by the police in the possession of an employe of Soviet House, the Premier disclosed.

These contained information and directions from the internationale of trade unions to Communist organizations in Great Britain and America, and were all of most recent dates.

Russia's Baltic Fleet Recalled to Its Base

London, May 24 (I.N.S.).—Russia has made preparations for eventualities following the break with Great Britain, and has issued a call for the Baltic fleet to return to its base after it had put to sea for a foreign cruise, according to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Copennagen, quoting the Stockholm Tidningen's Moscow correspondent.

Kellogg Believes Break Justifies U. S. Action

Washington, May 24 (I.N.S.).—Administration officials were deeply interested today in the action of Great Britain in breaking off relations with Soviet Russia.

Secretary Kellogg and other government officials considered the break as justifying the policy long held by the United States of non-intercourse with Moscow. This policy was originally laid down by Secretary Hughes and subsequently followed and endorsed by Kellogg.

therefore seem reasonable that he should choose the method of investigation.

"I will provide an opportunity for an interview for you at a later date."

Interviews with persons connected with the case, either as witnesses at the trial or in other regards, were resumed today, with the Governor, Lieutenant-Governor Allen and Joseph Wiggin, the Governor's personal counsel, sitting as before in the executive chamber.

William Brennan of Chelsea was the first man to appear for an interview and he was ushered immediately into the office.

The first mail to the Governor today brought a petition signed by Senator Robert M. Lafollette of Wisconsin, Mrs. Lafollette, his mother, and fifty residents of Washington. The petition asked appointment of an advisory committee.

A similar request was made in a letter from Mrs. Emily Newell Blair, vice-chairman of the Democratic national committee.

DOANE SUES HIS SUING WIFE

of several banks and a widely-known yachtsman.

On the heels of the separation suit Mrs. Doane filed her suit against Mrs. Densmore, charging her husband's love had been "stolen" by Mrs. Densmore, wife of G. Ellis Densmore, life-long friend of Doane.

According to the wife's allegations Mrs. Densmore and Doane spent many hours on board his yacht together and even when the yachting season was over they paid frequent visits to the Boston Yacht Club alone. Testifying in the separation hearing, Mrs. Densmore's husband said he had never observed anything wrong in the friendship between his wife and Doane.

At a hearing in February, Doane was ordered to pay his wife $1,000 counsel fees and $50 a week temporary alimony. The separation hearing brought out testimony by friends of Mrs. Doane who observed, they testified, Doane and Mrs. Densmore in their meetings. The Sea Lure, Doane's yacht, played a prominent part in the story.

British Flier Is Off on Lone Trip to Australia

Croydon, Eng., May 24 (A.P.).—With a spare propeller strapped beneath the fusilage of his two-seater moth airplane, Dennis Rook, a comparatively unknown aviator, hopped off today on a lone flight to Australia. His plane developed about 30 horsepower.

Rook intends to make the flight to Australia by easy stages, following the course taken by Sir Alan Cobham on his memorable trip. Before starting, Rook said:

"My plane is named Marjorie, after my fiancee. She is in Australia now, so I must succeed in reaching her."

During the war Rook served in the air force.

Many fled their homes on the arrival of the first apparatus.

The basement was occupied by Donald Greer, the janitor, his wife and Mrs. Greer's mother, Mrs. Josephine M. Davis. On the first floor were Mr and Mrs. Joseph Hermanson and Miss S. Lauer. The second floor was occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Cohen and their two children, Bernard, 4, and Julie, 3. Mr. Cohen carried both children to the street. The top floor, where fire did most damage, was occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Sumner Heilbronner, and their seven-year-old son Irwin; Lester Heilbronner and Mrs. Sarah Heilbronner, Sumner's mother. The child was carried out by his father.

Firemen dragged hoselines up a 75-foot incline to the house, from hydrants on Leamington street.

BETTY ALDEN ON SOCIETY

Success Is Already Assured for Country Club Races Next Month

ALTHOUGH JUNE 17 IS yet some distance along in the calendar, it appears that the social side of the Country Club races is bound to be a great success. Of course, it is a foregone conclusion that the equine attractions will be of the top-notch variety. That goes without saying. But with all last season's box holders lining up for reservations this year, it is assured that society of the capital "S" sort will be out in force.

THOSE VALIANT SOULS OF the Eastern Horse Club who must be thanked for the successful revival of the Country Club races look forward to a second year's red letter events. Many of the boxes have already been spoken for by last year's holders, and brilliant parties will gather for the two days of racing. And as for the stands, it is expected that they will be filled to overflowing, just as they were last year for those momentous two days that so significantly brought back the "races" into the local social scheme.

IT SEEMS A PITY THAT A girls' "polo" team does not materialize at Dedham. I understand that Miss Cornelia Clark, daughter of the veteran poloist, J. Dudley Clark, is eager for the fray, and that Miss Beatrice Howell is a ready second to the sport. Also Miss Mary Parkinson is swift and deft and versed in the intricacies of polo. Two others are the Misses Louise and Isabel Potter of Wellesley. Miss Elizabeth Sprague also has inclinations for the spirited game.

SO IT MAY WELL BE THAT with these as a nucleus, two fours may take the field some fine afternoon, much to the delight of the gallery. As it is, the men's matches continue to bring out a large company. More than twoscore motors were parked about the field of the Dedham Country and Polo Club on Saturday, and a large gallery is expected for Wednesday, when a round robin goes on for the assembled Stock Exchange visitors who have a Field Day then.

A HARVARD VARSITY FOUR and a Dedham first four, a Harvard substitute team and a Norfolk aggregation take the field in the round robin, commencing at four in the afternoon. So some spirited playing will be in order. The Dedham Field Day, some time in the early part of June, will be another occasion for match play. All of which adds interest to the polo program as served up by the Dedham enthusiasts who are so successfully bringing polo back into the sports' picture.

MISS ESTHER GREW

One of the younger set's talented dancers. She appeared recently in the Review of Dance.

PARENTS OF ATTRACTIVE sub-debutantes, whose preliminary training for bud days includes dancing, are quite delighted to the technique their daughters display in the art, as evidenced by the recent Review of Dance. Miss Esther Grew, daughter of the Edward Wigglesworth Grews, is one of the not-yet-presented set that has spent many pleasant hours posturing and pirouetting. In her gay "tulip" costume she was a bright figure in the Review. Her parents have a town house in Marlborough street and a country home in Dover.

IT IS A VERY CLEVER IDEA OF the Dedham Community set to stage their masque on June 17 during the early twilight hours, just late enough, in fact, to permit a dash from the Country Club to Dedham after the races for that day have finished. Leighton Rollins, author and director of the masque, is busy as can be with the preliminary details, and a very energetic group of matrons is lending expert assistance along that line.

THE AFFAIR WILL HAVE A lovely setting, for the Community House has for its grounds what amounts to a perfect amphitheatre. Given a sunny day overhead and velvety greensward beneath the feet, the natural setting will be pictorially perfect. The masque Mr. Rollins calls "Re-Creation."

FOR MANY OF THE LOCAL young people tennis continues a paramount interest. The hour not spent at the nets they count as lost, so keenly do they follow tennis fortunes. Miss Virginia Rice and Miss Rosamond Newton, two stars that promise to shine with much brilliancy, next try their skill (in doubles) at the Oakley Country Club. And later on, in June, Miss Rice goes down to Hartford for some match play. Life for these enthusiastic players seems to be just one match after another.

ARMS PARLEY TO CONVENE ON JUNE 20

Washington, May 24 (A.P.).—The three-power naval limitations conference called by President Coolidge will convene in Geneva June 20, Secretary Kellogg today informed the British and Japanese Ambassadors after informal conversations had shown the date acceptable to all.

Conferences at the State Department relative to augmentation of the American representation at the conference will be resumed upon the arrival here of Hugh Gibson, Minister to Belgium, and head of the American delegation to the recent League of Nations preparatory limitations conference at Geneva.

KELLOGG, HUGHES.

Reports have been current that some outstanding figure in American life might be added to the delegation. Secretary Kellogg's name, as well as that of Charles E. Hughes, has been mentioned in this connection, but there has been no announcement such a course would be followed.

At the Washington arms conference President Harding was represented by Mr. Hughes, Senator Lodge of Massachusetts and Senator Underwood of Alabama. The latter two took up the fight for ratification of the treaties by Congress.

DULLES MAY GO.

There are indications that Allen W. Dulles, formerly an official of the State Department and now a member of a New York law firm, will be added to the United States delegation as a technical expert.

Additional naval experts also are to be selected. Without material change, this country's delegation to the three-power conference would include Mr. Gibson, Hugh Wilson, who has sailed to take his post as Minister to Switzerland; Pinckney Tuck, the American consul at Geneva, and George Gordon of the staff of the American Legation at Budapest.

DUNCAN GIRLS IN DOUBLE WEDDING

Los Angeles, May 24 (A.P.).—Rosetta Duncan, elder of the Duncan sisters of musical comedy fame, has admitted her engagement to William Beri, film technical expert.

She also revealed that a double wedding, with her sister, Vivian, in the role of the other bride, will take place in Hollywood within a few months.

Rosetta revealed a pact of long standing between the two sisters, which forbids one to marry without the other following suit, and a double wedding will mark their entry into what would be for them a new and untried field—matrimony.

"I positively will not be married without Vivian," Rosetta declared.

Just who will lead the younger of the sisters to the alter Rosetta refused to say.

"If Nils Astor is to be the lucky man I am glad," she told reporters, "but you will have to get that part of the wedding from him." Astor, a Scandinavian film actor, refused to make a statement.

Rosetta and Beri first met more than 15 years ago when both were attending a day nursery school here shortly after Beri's parents arrived in Los Angeles from Rochester, N. Y.

Following the World War Beri worked in New York City where he became connected with the laboratory side of the film industry.

"REDS" OVERRUN CHINA, SAYS BAY STATE PRIEST

Red propaganda is overrunning China and "Death to the Foreigner" is the cry in many districts, according to a letter received in Springfield today from Rev. Cormac Shannahan, a native of Boston who went to China as a Passionist missionary last Fall.

Rev. Cormac Shannahan

The letter was received by Thomas E. Sheehan, friend of the missionary. "In some districts all foreigners were chased out, including priests and ministers," the letter says. "In our districts they closed all the schools and we were forced to take refuge in Shanghai. In the Nanking affair a deliberate and well-planned attempt to kill all foreigners was made."

The priest was in the Hunnan district when the trouble started.

RAISE GYPSY AND BROWN-TAIL MOTH QUARANTINE

Washington, May 24 (A.P.).—An area of 475 square miles in Vermont and 93 in Connecticut was released from the gypsy and brown tail moth quarantine in an order announced today by the Federal Horticultural Board effective July 1.

In Vermont the following towns were included: Berkshire, Richford, Enosburg, Montgomery, Bakersfield, Belvidere, Fletcher, Waterville, Cambridge, Underhill, Bolton and Huntington while the Connecticut area included Goshen and Litchfield.

AIMEE'S PRINCE TO LOSE HIS 'ALIMONY'

Paris, May 24 (A.P.).—A decree of divorce was granted today to the Princess Galatzine, formerly Aimee Crocker, California heiress.

The court upheld completely her contention that Prince Mistislav Galatzine, whom she married in September, 1925, had deceived her and maintained illegal relations with other women.

The Princess has been married five times.

The Prince, against whom the findings of the court ran throughout, must pay the entire costs of the suit, and will not receive the $125 a month "alimony" which he claimed.

Although this sum was stipulated in a letter from the Princess which was admitted as a sort of marriage settlement and which was read during the hearing of the suit, the court held that he had deceived his wife and therefore had lost all right to what otherwise could not, under the terms of the contract, be denied him.

The Prince charged that the marriage was a purely commercial one, animated by the American woman's desire to become a princess.

The Prince expects to be absent about two months.

It is not decided whether he will return through the United States.

DENTISTS ARRAIGNED ON FALSE CLAIM CHARGES

Two dentists, Charles W. Rodgers of Boylston street and Charles J. Fox of Lynn, were arraigned in the United States District Court today before Judge James M. Morton on Federal indictments, charging them with presenting false claims to the United States Veterans' Bureau for dental services to ex-service men.

Rodgers, against whom there were 16 counts in the indictment, pleaded nolo and had his case continued, without date, for disposition.

The Lynn dentist, charged in seven counts with making false claims for professional work on ex-service men totalling more than $2,000, retracted a plea of not guilty entered in March of last year, and his case also was put back by Judge Morton for disposition, after a plea of guilty today.

PARIS SHOWERS NEW HONORS ON 'LINDY'

Harmon was the donor of the Harmon Medal, awarded annually to the outstanding aviator of each country. He took occasion to pay tribute to Shirley Short, the mail pilot to whom the award was made last year.

MAY VISIT SWEDEN

"It was a fine award, and well deserved," Lindbergh said.

Somebody questioned him as to what he would do about the rapidly accumulating pile of commercial offers he is receiving.

"I won't think about them until I return to the United States," he replied. "This flight was organized without any sort of profit, and I am not thinking of profit now."

"Surely you are not going back to the mail service?" he was asked. The "Lucky" smile broadened.

"You know, I never left the mail service," was the simple response.

Lindbergh told Colonel Harmon he had definitely decided to fly to Brussels Saturday, as he had been requested, and then continue on to London Monday.

After that, his plans are hazy. He is still considering a trip to Sweden, but said he was not planning, as reported, to go to Germany.

The aviator revealed that his correspondance and flow of telegrams exceeded those for the American Ambassador, and that the Embassy staff was overwhelmed by the deluge.

During the last hour before it came time to dress for the American Club luncheon in his honor, Lindbergh and the ambassador turned themselves into a sort of drafting committee to answer the more important cable messages and telegrams remaining without replies.

Some of them were from monarchs and heads of States. Lindbergh remarked that he wanted to "Get the text right."

HARD TO GET SHOES.

For the luncheon he wore one of his new Paris-made suits—a natty double-breasted dark gray affair. With it he wore an obviously new pair of tan shoes and a gray changeable silk tie.

The shoes were the hardest thing to obtain of the whole new outfit, for the flier's foot is shaped somewhat differently from the one usually fitted along the Paris boulevards. He tried on twelve pairs before he found one that felt right.

Before leaving for the luncheon, Lindbergh had a picturesque caller in General N. N. Baratoss, president of the Czarist Association of Russian Mutilated Veterans.

He entered the American Embassy in full Cossack regalia, with high boots, baggy blue trousers, a fuzzy white astrakhan headpiece, orders and decorations gleaming on his chest, and daggers stuck in his belt, with a well-loaded cartridge bandoller over his shoulder.

Baratoss' mission was milder than his appearance. He asked Lindbergh to attend a ball Friday night at the Invalides for the benefit of the Russian wounded veterans.

New York Plans "Greatest Welcome" for Lindbergh

New York, May 24 (A.P.).—New York's welcome to "Slim" Lindbergh today assumed proportions that might well justify his fears expressed in Paris when he said he is "scared of what those New Yorkers will do" when he returns.

All the traditional welcome festivities that New York so loves to extend to returning heroes and heroines and visiting royalty will be carried out, only on a scale far exceeding anything of the past.

The municipal tug Macon, which has gone down the bay to meet "Bobby" Jones, the conqueror of golfdom; "Trudy" Ederle, the conqueror of the English channel, and scores of other notable folk, will again carry its official reception committee to greet the conquering airman.

In a triumphant parade from the Battery, through the thousands that undoubtedly will line Broadway, the returning hero will be escorted to City Hall, where he will be received by Mayor Walker.

While reception plans in New York advanced, other cities throughout the country offered their hospitality.

St. Louis, adopted home town of the hero, announced plans for an elaborate barbecue as the feature of a great reception. The large Swedish population of Worcester, Mass., also wants to receive the aviator.

Presentation of the $25,000 Orteig prize, won by the airman, will take place in America, cable dispatches from Paris said.

Friends of Lindbergh today said they believed he will turn down the hundreds of offers, totaling more than $1,000,000, for his appearances in movies, vaudeville and other enterprises.

"Lindy" Is Scornful of Any Marriage Offers by Mail

Paris, May 24.—While Lindbergh's mail was being photographed by camera men today the young flier admitted he hadn't had time to read any of it.

He was asked if he thought there were any marriage proposals in the huge stack of mail, and with a snort of disgust he replied, "I don't know."

In regard to his trip to Brussels on Saturday he was asked where he would stop in Brussels.

He smiled and answered: "I don't know; perhaps I'll take a small tent along."

"Lucky's" Plane in Honor Place at French Banquet

Le Bourget, France, May 24 (A.P.)—Lindbergh could not be present in person at a luncheon in the Le Bourget hangar today, given for the president of the Chambers of Commerce in France, but his plane draped with the French and American flags, held a place of honor behind President Doumergue, who presided.

Although the flier was in Paris attending the American Club luncheon the rumor spread that he would be here, and a crowd of several thousand gathered to see him. They were keenly disappointed, but were appeased when told he would arrive later and settled down for a patient wait of several hours.

"Lucky Lindy" on Air Tonight

For the first time in Boston, "Lucky Lindy" will be heard when "Big Broher" Bob Emery sings it from WEEI at 6.50 tonight. The famous song about Captain Lindbergh will be whistled and sung everywhere in a few days. Listen tonight.

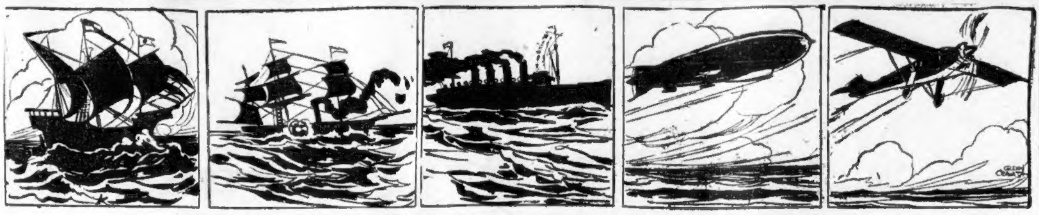
'Lindy' Cuts Christopher's Time ∾ From 69 Days to 33 Hours



EVOLUTION OF OCEAN TRAVEL AND SPEED FROM 1492 TO 1927 SHOWN IN SKETCHES

In 1492 skeptics said Columbus couldn't do it. Sketch of his Santa Maria in which he discovered America 69 days after he sailed from Spain.

The first steamship to cross the Atlantic Ocean sailed from Savannah, Ga., on May 24, 1819, and arrived in Liverpool 27 days later.

The next milestone in speedy crossing was passed when the Mauretania, in September, 1924, made it in 5 days from Cherbourg.

The big Los Angeles (then the ZR4), sailed from Germany in October, 1924, to America in 81 hours, 17 minutes.

Then came "Lindy," the wisest "flying fool" there ever was, and he hopped over in 33 hours and 29 minutes, doing the "impossible" too!

INTERNATIONAL RECORD SET BY 'LINDY' FILMS

At the very moment "Lucky Lindy" was circling the Le Bourget flying field in Paris, International News Reel pictures of his take off were being shown in San Francisco, 3500 miles away.

Establishing a record for fast service the International Newsreel dispatched its film of the takeoff in a plane to San Francisco.

Three films were made. One was held in New York, one was sent to Chicago and the other to San Francisco. As the news was flashed from across the briny that Lindbergh had landed Loew's State Theatre in San Francisco flashed the film on its screen.

The demonstration which followed was unprecedented. Men and women wept, laughed and shouted while the band played the Star Spangled Banner. Lucky and International had come through!

BYRD TO MAKE PARIS HOP 'FOR DATA ONLY'

New York, May 24 (A.P.)—A flight to Paris "for the purpose of scientific and practical observation" will be made by Commander Richard E. Byrd in the monoplane America.

Commander Byrd, in a joint statement with Grover A. Whalen, vice president of the Trans-Oceanic Company, owners of the plane, asserts the successful flight from New York to Paris by Captain Charles A. Lindbergh has occasioned no change in their plans.

The Polar flier is continuing his preparations to hop off from Roosevelt Field, Long Island, in the triple-motored Fokker monoplane with Lieutenant George O. Noville and Bert Acosta. Byrd has tentatively figured on starting some time this week.

"The flight was planned for scientific purposes," said Whalen. "Lindbergh's achievement, great as it was, has not lessened the need for scientific data on trans-Atlantic flying."

It was pointed out by Byrd that Rodman Wanamaker, president of the company and chief backer of the project, had no desire to detract from the glory of Lindbergh, but felt that plans for the America's dash to Europe had progressed too far to be abandoned.

Rumors of two alternative flights, one from Etah, Greenland, to Point Barrow Alaska, and the other from San Francisco to the Hawaiian Islands, were dispelled by the announcement.

Find Shoes, Coats, Hats After Le Bourget Rush

Paris, May 24 (A.P.).—A pair of trousers, hundreds of hats, ladies' and men's coats, handbags and odd shoes have been gathered by the army of workman clearing Le Bourget flying field.

Squads of gardeners were at work today replacing shrubs and flower beds, trampled or torn up by the enthusiastic crowds that swept over the field when Captain Lindbergh landed Saturday night.

About fifty persons were hurt in the crush. A few policemen and soldiers also were injured while rescuing the plane from the fury of souvenir hunters.

German Air League Asks "Lindy" to Visit Berlin

Berlin, May 24 (A.P.).—The Lufthansa, or German Aerial League, which operates a continental air service, has invited Captain Lindbergh to fly from Paris to Stockholm by way of Berlin. The German Aero Club proposes to entertain him here en route.

The Luthansa offers to place a private plane at his disposal to carry him back from Stockholm to London or any other point he desires.

WARSHIP FOR LINDBERGH, IF HE WANTS IT

Washington, May 24 (I.N.S.).—Captain Charles A. Lindbergh will be brought back home on an American warship—if he will come.

Assistant Secretary of Navy Robinson announced today that the Navy will have six ships sailing from Europe on June 15, and Lindbergh may choose any one to make the homeward trip.

The ships include four destroyers, the cruiser Memphis and the converted yacht Scorpion. The Scorpion is an old boat, which may have to be towed by the Memphis before the journey is ended.

Robinson hopes Lindbergh will pick a destroyer.

New York, May 24 (A.P.).—Charles Lindbergh arranged for steamship passage back to New York before he hopped for Paris. With him on his flight he took an order on the White Star Line for a return ticket, which was issued to him by Herbert S. Maybam, agent for the line in St. Louis.

Coincident with the news that Lindbergh had arranged for his passage home before leaving came an announcement from the line that P. S. Franklin, president of the International Mercantile Marine Company, had cabled the Paris office of the company offering Lindbergh passage to New York with his plane on any White Star liner.

Paris Paper Urges Nobel Peace Prize for Lindbergh

Paris, May 24 (I.N.S.).—The Petit Parisien today nominates Captain Charles A. Lindbergh for the Nobel Peace Prize.

This paper declares that Lindbergh has "united France and America," and that his flight across the Atlantic has done as much for peace and understanding as the Locarno pact drawn up by M. Briand, Sir Austen Chamberlain and Herr Stresemann.

Brussels, May 24 (A.P.)—As in Paris, the American Embassy will take charge of Captain Lindbergh when he lands here Saturday on his flight from Paris. James C. Dunn, the American charge d'affaires, was engaged today in making arrangements for the visit, and the American club was planning a big banquet in his honor.

It is believed almost certain that King Albert will wish to see the daring aviator from overseas as soon as he arrives, for, being a veteran flier and a man of scientific tastes, he has shown a special interest in everything pertaining to Lindbergh and his remarkable achievement.

London, May 24.—Capt. Charles A. Lindbergh is assured of a welcome second only to that received on his arrival at Paris, when he visits London next week.

Indications are that the Prince of Wales will read the list of prominent men who will greet the American flyer. The American Club is expecting a reply today to the invitation extended to Lindbergh asking him to bring the Spirit of St. Louis to London.

The invitation was extended with the heartiest co-operation of Ambassador Houghton, who is expected to lead Americans in London in welcoming Lindbergh.

Members of the Aero Club and other organizations are planning to join in the rousing welcome.

A message received from Paris stated that Lindbergh had decided to accept the invitation and that he would arrive here Monday.

LINDY'S MOTHER 'MUST BE HAPPY,' SAYS MRS. COLI

Marseilles, France, May 24 (A.P.).—"How happy his mother must be."

These were the words of Mme. Coli, mother of the man who with Captain Nungesser failed so gallantly in a transatlantic flight attempt, in speaking of the mother of Captain Lindbergh, who succeeded so gallantly.

Then she added: "And what courage the boy has."

The sixty-eight-year-old mother of the French hero wept with relief when she learned the American had reached Paris safely. No one knew better than she how that other mother must have felt as the long hours passed without word.

"I am glad France gave the American such a glorious reception," said Captain Coli's father, an old seaman: "By it France has honored herself and shown her greatness."

Then the thoughts of the father and mother turned back to their own boy, and with a tone of sadness in his voice, the father said: "The people haven't forgotten him, and we still hope; we will continue to hope.

RADIO DIALOG by C. WILLIAM RADOS

CAPTAIN LINDBERGH and his airplane occupy everyone's thoughts. And rightly so for the courageous flyer has done a task all thought almost impossible. Radio can share some of the triumph of the brave achievement.

Late Saturday evening an airplane landed in Paris. Monday morning, papers here showed pictures of the landing. While the flyer was earning his rest, pictures were speeding to English radio stations. There dynamos 15 feet high turned faster and faster. Far up in the air delicate wires took up the tremendous current and electricity surged forth across the Atlantic.

In New York a small machine turned a cylindrical tube. As the tube turned there came from it reproductions of the scenes at Le Bourget, of the dauntless airman, and of the plane itself.

• • •

And due to radio, he gets photographs of the event in a few hours instead of days.

• • •

Dialing over the air last night we listened with our critical mind sharply focussed for flaws. But as radio pays for our bread and butter we never find any fault with it. If you don't think so read on.

• • •

First we heard Neil's Serenading Shoemakers from WJZ. Although their obligato was somewhat intermezzo, nevertheless the grand pomodoro was some singer. Doubtless they are good shoemakers.

• • •

Then we picked up the paper to read what WAAT was offering. The composing room had made a mistake and the program read "loco program," when it should have been "local program."

After listening awhile we decided there was no mistake in the paper.

Then we tuned in a local station. We were just in time. For the local announcer said, "Stand by for the New York program." We stood. The New York announcer said, "Stand by for your local station announcement."

You first, my dear Gaston.

BEAUTIES TO MEET QUEEN

Battleship for Harvard Boys

Story of a Girl Who Asked That Life Should Pay Her in Full

Roen Ross, at 13, promises her dying father to take care of her mother and little brother, Jackie. When she is 18 and Jackie is 9, she meets, in Gloucester, Michael Scott who tells her he loves her. She agrees to wait for five years for him. Her cousin Evelyn calls and tells her of her numerous flirtations. Roen finds it difficult to run her household on the family's small income. James Burton, her employer, takes an interest in her, much to her mother's delight. He takes them both motoring. Later Burton shows that he loves her. But she makes light of it to Michael. He invites her to a college ball and she grows a little jealous when she sees a beautiful girl kiss him.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER 14.

Roen shut her eyes, her heart in flames. When she looked again Michael was laughing.

In a rigid hauteur—not deigning answers, she followed her partner, and when he offered to escort her to her friends she said coldly: "Thank you, it won't be necessary."

She left him staring after her dismayed and indignant as she turned with the grace of an injured queen to the dressing room. She would not dance the next dance. She felt that she couldn't dance.

She stood before a mirror in the corner, blinking, smiling, mortally ashamed of her uncontrol. Could Michael help it if a girl deliberately raised her lips to him? Would she even wish him to be so uncouth and priggish as to refuse the kiss?

She did not wish to look at her absurd, trembling mouth. She stooped down, unbuttoning and buttoning her slipper. Two other girls were putting on a similar farce, telling in strained, excited voices how they'd stolen in her to "cut" dances. Neither believed the other.

It wasn't Susan's kiss, but that he had taken only two dances, that he had wanted only two dances. She was staggered by this—hurt to the inmost heart.

And suddenly she recalled the Saturday he came with the green satin: the moment when they looked up with warm, swimming eyes and laughed and hid their faces on each other's shoulders.

Her thought softened. Very much sobered, even a litle pale, she now powdered her nose. Incredible that Michael would give this wanton hurt. She would return to the floor.

If she learned that of his own wish he had done this— She began to tremble, and, reaching the threshold, paused because her hands were shaking.

The door was open a little. Through the crack she saw a dark form moving impatiently. She pushed the door and went quietly, swiftly, without looking up, toward him.

"Well, what in the world!" said he, seizing her arm and pushing her hurriedly before him. "We've missed half a dance—three-quarters of it." He took her gloved hand, swept his arm about her waist.

"Did we have this dance together, Michael?"

At the quiet tone he glanced suddenly in her face—found it very white and the sweet, ardent mouth he so loved, now trembling pitifuly. He was instantly touched and in a flash read her heart. "Roney—Roney—why, you darling. You thought I meant that? You went away to hide?"

"Should I have known that you were 'S', Michael?"

"Yes, and that I'm K and Z and X and every other initial when it's on your program."

Her eyes closed—for an instant the lights were dimmed. He bent down and kissed her wet lashes. He said huskily, "Dear Asthore!"

Roen never forgot the thrill of this moment. Long afterwards when the picture of the immense fish net abloom with the scarlet geraniums would come searing her mind with a terrible anguish she would nevertheless feel again the rapture of his hand pressing hers, his young lips brushing so tenderly and sweetly on her wet lashes.

She now said, with her lips near his, "Michael—Michael dearest . . ." and she had no consciousness of the floor or of effort in the dance. She was borne along in the winging uplifting buoyance of their spirits. She and Michael seemed flying joyously through rainbows of color and song.

She laughed openly, not meaning to be cruel, when Ollie Horne, her partner in the sixth dance, confessed that he was "smitten" and asked her flatteringly to "cut some

I'm 'Miss World'

WINS $2,000 GOLD

Miss Dorothy Britton of Jersey City, who entered the international beauty revue at Galveston, Tex., as "Miss New York," then was acclaimed "Miss U. S." and finally "Miss Beauty Queen of the Universe." Many beauties from abroad competed.

CROWN 'QUEEN OF UNIVERSE'

Galveston, Tex., May 24 (A.P.)—Faced with keen competition, including eight beauties from foreign countries, Miss Dorothy Britton of Jersey City won first place in the annual international bathing girl revue which ended here today.

Miss Britton, entered as "Miss New York," was named "Beauty Queen of the Universe," after she had been designated "Miss United States" in competition with entries from twenty-six American cities. She received $2,000 in gold and a silver plaque. Miss Britton is a slender demi-blonde.

AMERICANS TO GREET ROYALTY

Sixteen to Be Presented at First Court of the Season at Buckingham Palace

London, May 24 (A.P.).—The first installment of London's great annual display of feminine beauty will be given tonight, when 16 Americans will be among the many foreign women presented to King George and Queen Mary at Buckingham Palace by the wives of the Ambassadors.

It will be the first court of the season and hundreds of debutantes and others will throng the palace.

PALACE OPENS AT 8:30.

At 8:30 the palace will be opened for the reception of the guests, but the first cars will take their places in line as early as 5 p. m. A number of guests, as is the custom, will call photographers on the way to have themselves pictured in their court finery; others will defer this ceremony until after the court, and fashionable photographers are likely to be busy until 3 o'clock in the morning.

The Mall, the long three-lined avenue forming the main approach to the palace, will become a sort of grandstand, whence the populace can gaze on the court-favored in the splendor of their gowns.

Tonight's presentation will be a diplomatic affair, and for this reason undoubtedly will be more elaborate than the court of the next night and the others that are to follow. Final rehearsals were staged yesterday.

THOSE TO BE PRESENTED.

Mrs. Houghton, wife of the American Ambassador, will present the following American women:

In the diplomatic circle: Mesdames Arthur Atkins, Old Lyme, Ct.; William Cooper, New York; James Orville Gawne, Pittsburgh; Hubert Harmon, Sheridan, Wyo.; Robert Kirkpatrick, Dothan, Ala.; Charles Lyn, Washington; the Misses Florence Lowden, Oregon, Ill.; daughter of Frank O. Lowden, former Governor of Illinois, and Catherine Wellington of East Aurora, N. Y.

In the general circle: Mesdames Frederick Atherton, Washington; Edwin Grosvenor, Washington, Ct.; Franklin Pepper, Philadelphia, and the Misses Elsie Barber, New York; Helen Hardenbergh, Governor's Island, N. Y.; Gladys Hopkins, Philadelphia, Suzanne Ilton, New York, and Evelyn Walker of Washington.

Kicked to Death by Horse

Springfield, May 24 (A.P.).—While his wife was frantically searching for him when he failed to arrive home at the scheduled hour, Jacob Posnick was lying in the hospital dying from the effects of a horse's kick. He succumbed shortly afterward.

JAILED AS SLAYER

MOTHER AND SLAIN CHILD

Mrs. Ida Rock Kelley, who is serving a term in the reformatory, holding John H. Kelley, Jr., for whose death she was sentenced. Albert H. Doe of Palmer was given a 10 to 12-year prison sentence for the same crime.

Mrs. Snyder's Final Plea for Sympathy

Mrs. Ruth Snyder, in the Boston Evening American today, continues in this second installment her final plea to the public for sympathy and mercy. Written from a condemned cell, her life story will relate her side, in detail, of the murder of her husband.

By RUTH SNYDER

CHAPTER 2.

(Copyright, 1927, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

I WAS born in a flat at 125th street and Morningside avenue, New York city, on March 27, 1895. I was christened Mamie Ruth. My brother, Andrew, two years older than myself, was the only other child in our family.

He now lives at No. 1116 Woodcrest avenue, New York City. He was born in Sweden.

We were in ordinary circumstances. My father, formerly a sailor, had left the sea when he married and was engaged in a small contracting business. His name was Harry Sorenson. I don't know where he got the "Brown" or why, but he adopted it here.

My mother was Josephine Amelia Anderson. She was born in Sweden and came of a long line of seafaring men and small farmers. My father's people were Norwegians, mostly living by the sea.

My recollections of my early years are not sunny.

My father was a nervous, overworked man. He paid little attention to us, seldom laid a hand on me, either in affection or punishment. He loved my mother devotedly, but not in any showy manner.

MAIL TRUCK IN WILD FLIGHT

Narrowly missing pedestrians, autos and trees in its mad, wild flight, a parcel post auto truck went on a lone joy ride in James street, Brookline, today and ended up by trying to enter an apartment house on Beacon street.

The truck was parked in James street, an incline, while the driver, James Mullen, made a delivery. He came out to see the car on its way down hill. When he tried to leap aboard to stop it, the truck threw him to the street and continued to Beacon street.

Several pedestrians narrowly escaped being struck and the morning traffic on the boulevard gave the driverless truck a wide berth. It crossed the El reservation and bumped its way through a fence to the door of an apartment house.

Final Bid 3 S .. Played by West.

Salient Points of the Bidding

East, holding strong support for his partner's Spades—length and two honors in the suit, a singleton Heart, and a side Ace—makes a jump assist to three Spades over North's informatory double to shut out, if possible, a Heart response by South.

Salient Points of the Play

Trick 2. West counts his possible losers as two Diamonds, and one Club; and also a Spade, should the three spades outstanding be found in one hand. The chance of picking up a Diamond trick by finding South with the Ace is remote because of North's double, nor does there seem to be any way to prevent a Club loss. West must therefore so play the hand as to provide for the remote possibility of the three adverse trumps being in one hand. If so held by South, game cannot be made, but if held by North, West can make game by stripping his own hand and Dummy's of Hearts and Clubs, and throwing North in the lead with a Club. To make this possible, North must hold the Jack of Clubs as well as the Queen already shown by his lead of the King. Since West has no side suit to establish, nor to protect by exhausting adverse trumps, there exists no imperative need for an immediate lead of trumps. Accordingly West leads the three of Hearts from Dummy as the first step towards the planned stripping of his hands.

Trick 6. North must lead away from his tenace in Diamonds or make a trick-losing lead of another suit.

Mr. Whitehead will answer questions concerning your Bridge problems. Write to him care of this paper, enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope.

Ivanhoe ∾ Part Two ∾ By Sir Walter Scott

CEDRIC and his ward, Lady Rowena, and Athelstane went to a tournament at Ashby. The tournament was held by John, brother of King Richard, the Lion-Hearted, who thus sought to make himself popular, with the idea of deposing Richard when he returned from the Holy Land.

BOIS-GUILBERT, the Knight Templar, was one of five challengers who agreed to meet anyone in combat. The five were successful until late in the day. Then a Strange Knight suddenly appeared and challenged the Templar to a deadly combat with sharp lances. They met in the lists and on the second tilt Bois-Guilbert was unhorsed. Then, in swift succession, the Strange Knight defeated the other four challengers. His prowess astonished the beholders, for only two men, Richard the King, and Ivanhoe, had ever before defeated Bois-Guilbert.

THE Strange Knight now had the right to name the Queen of Beauty, who was to crown the victor of next day's tournament. He stopped before the lovely Rowena, slowly lowered the point of his lance on which the crown was hung, and laid it at her feet.

'LISTEN DEARIE' SPARKLES AT THE WILBUR

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

IF there is to be any realization of extended hot weather exhilaration in musical comedy, the faithful may gaze with hope upon "Listen Dearie," which last night moved into the Wilbur to the accompaniment of much dulcet melody and endless streams of rippling fun. Thin of course—for what entertainment fit to tickle the sweating brow in June could hope for more than passing attention unless the dramatic waistline is narrow, the tunes diverting and the ensembles carved out of graceful, illuminating humanity.

EASY ENTERTAINMENT.

In these respects "Listen Dearie" measures up to the demands of the hardest critic from the suit and cloak trade—or whatever trade it is that keeps the theatre open when the seashore and the road house send out their loudest call. Considered specifically in these declining days of a moist May and an approaching season of higher temperature "Listen Dearie" offered much that should hold the interest of those who insist upon the theatre as a natural source of safe recreation. Naturally, good music will touch any ear and smart girls and smarter dancers will keep an honest eye in precise and persistent focus. These items formed the foundation of "Listen Dearie." Plot being inconsequential, the hazards of the hero may be left to their own dull and not particularly interesting progress.

If you have any taste for dancing you will gather more than your share of thrills from Violet Dell, Frank Bernard, Jerry Bell and Shirley Vernon. These valiant toilers in their art more than made up for any lapses discovered in their less talented companions. Miss Dell, especially, reflected the grace and beauty of youth in glorious frolic, while Mr. Bernard, more sensational, proved himself as much of a contortionist as dancer in his exultant flares.

ALL TO THE MERRY.

Naturally, comedy prevailed. George Schiller, veteran of many musical comedy expeditions, played the silver-haired papa with suspicious reliability; Fred Hillebrand brought new antics and a few blushes to the footlights, and Stanley Ridges kept everybody in good spirits by his own misery at the loss of a set of very fine false teeth. Also there was a comedy detective, played by Charles Howard, in the full fashion of a man who never stays sober. Shirley Vernon and Laura Lee, flanked by an animated chorus, maintained feminine superiority in song and in refined jest. To keep proceedings right up to the eighteenth amendment, June Day presented the flashy side of a "padlocked" night club proprietress, showing by constant changes in costume that handsome gowns are woman's best asset.

There was no discounting the approval of a big first night audience. The song numbers, of which "Tit for Tat" was the best, immediately caught the favor of the house and held it for many encores. Taken in broad view, "Listen Dearie" fairly sparkled with just the tunes, the nonsense and the dances that make theatre going worth the effort when the mercury begins to soar.

TOLSTOY FILM IS BRILLIANT AT STATE

By LEO GAFFNEY.

Dolores Del Rio

Tolstoy's "Resurrection" has gone into the films with an honesty of purpose that does credit to everyone connected with its production. Edwin Carewe directed, Count Ilya Tolstoy, son of the author, supervised its scenes and the featured players are Rod La Rocque and Dolores Del Rio. Technically, the photoplay has its flaws, but in spirit it remains true to the novel. No attempt has been made to sweeten it up by a happy ending; the hero does not wake to find that it was all a dream, and the luckless heroine does not yield her cup of sorrow for an ice cream soda.

In short, the scenarist has taken Tolstoy's word for it that Russia is a long way from Hollywood. And, so, we have hard luck on the Tartary Steppes, a woman betrayed, degraded, and sentenced for life to the dreaded salt mines of Siberia.

Mr. Carewe seems to have hit the sombre note squarely. His prison setting is a place where the misery of despair is something to haunt your dreams. The wretched inmates present an appalling sight. The men beat against the iron gratings screaming; the women, ugly in suffering, slink about like caged cats. It is in this scene that Miss Del Rio achieves a brilliancy of performance unmatched by any other young actress in recent films. Her abandonment here is more complete, more pitiable than the most wretched of hags.

The Dimitri of Rod La Rocque is no less admirable. He moves through his moody character as if he were really undergoing the tortures of remorse he portrays. The film "stars" him, as well it might.

Strangely enough, Mr. Carewe alternates sets of uncommon strength with some of the most noticeable painted backgrounds ever seen. These are at unfortunate odds with a production that otherwise might hit at a few records.

Appropriately enough, the State stage program is given over to the Russian Art Choir, an organization of singers whose magnificent voices were first heard in this country in "The Song of the Flame," which played here earlier in the season.

CHARMING REVUE HIT AT KEITH'S THEATRE

There is a clever youth with supremely educated feet, a twain of charming girls with ditto, a tuneful Manila band, and a gorgeous, glittering setting, all in one act at B. F. Keith's Theatre this week. The youth is Dave Apollon, the girls Marjorie Lane and Dorothy Charles, the band seven Filipinos, and the ensemble, known as Dave Apollon's Revue, is as entertaining as anything that ever hit the boards.

This Apollon person is a whiz-marvel-genius or any other complimentary epithet you want to bestow upon him. His fair companions, Marjorie with her acrobatic terpsichore, Dorothy with classic jazz steps, are also in the superlative class.

Roger Imhof has a clever characterization, Boganny's Troupe is funny and Cecil Cunningham smart as usual.

Night Club Queen

JUNE DAY

Frisks through "Listen Dearie" at the Wilbur as the padlocked proprietress of one of those places that cater to the midnight appetite.

LIVELY FARCE AT ST. JAMES

No young man ever sought matrimony under greater stress than that encountered by Walter Gilbert in the title role of the farce, "Pomeroy's Past," the play of the week at the Keith-Albee St. James.

Like every other enthusiastic gentleman who contemplates the "high dive" with satisfied exhilaration, Mr. Gilbert announced his intentions at home with few if any misgivings. And like every other unsuspecting victim of farce comedy he had his eyes opened.

The disillusionment was amply attended to by an elder sister—spinster, of course—who combined her fancied knack of domestic administration with the boy's well-meaning stupidity to cause his undoing

Forcibly colliding with the strictest opposition from this severe lady, the unhappy Pomeroy decided on a bold stroke. Children! (He could adopt some.) If he were a father, sister must yield. But, of course, somebody had to spill the beans and before a happy bride could acquire the groom of her choice the gravest suspicions rested heavily on a perspiring Pomeroy and, what is more important, the audience had a good time.

In the West End

HOWARD — Burlesque, featuring Mike Sacks and a score of others. Also vaudeville and pictures and a talk by Jack Sheehan, referee of the Sharkey-Maloney bout.

BOWDOIN SQ.—"The Demi Bride," with Lew Cody, "The Monkey Talks," with Olive Borden, and a Hal Roach comedy, "A One Mamma Man."

IRENE FRANKLIN WINS ORPHEUM AUDIENCE

Irene Franklin

Irene Franklin, internationally famous for her red hair and presentation of character songs, sang her way into the hearts of a capacity audience yesterday at Loew's Orpheum. There is no denying that Miss Franklin is an artist. She entertained with a group of clever songs that brought rounds of applause. She writes the words for all her songs, while her accompanist, Jerry Jarnagin, composes the music. Mr. Jarnagin also entertained with a few impressive piano selections.

William Ebbs, in a ventriloquial turn, seemed to delight the crowd, and Eddie Cook and the Shaw Sisters presented a smart musical production. Other acts included Bob Yates and Evelyn Carson in a humorous skit, "Getting Soaked"; Johnny Merman, in 'A Cloud With a Silver Lining," and the Leach La Quinlan Trio in mid-air feats.

On the screen was shown Lon Chaney in Mr. Wu," a colorful picture of the Orient, in which Mr. Chaney portrayed a mysterious Chinese mandarin, master of the House of Wu. Renee Adoree in striking Chinese make-up played the part of his daughter.

EVA LE GALLIENNE IS COMING NEXT MONDAY

Eva Le Gallienne and the Civic Repertory Theatre Players of New York will present three of the most successful plays in their repertoire at the Hollis beginning next Monday. The opening production will be "Cradle Song." This is a comedy in two acts with an interlude given by Sayre Crawley. Miss Le Gallienne will play the part of Sister Joanna of the Cross. Others in the cast are Josephine Hutchinson, Egon Brecher, Alma Kruger and Leona Roberts.

There will be two performances of "The Master Builder," by Ibsen.

Continuing Shows

PLYMOUTH—"The Pirates of Penzance" and "Iolanthe." Final week of these tuneful Gilbert and Sullivan operas.

GAYETY—Tommy "Bozo" Snyder in His Own Show. A laugh-compelling exploitation in burlesque.

COPLEY—"The Ghost Train." Mr. Clive says this is the final week but you know how it is with popular shows.

COLONIAL—Fred Stone in "Criss Cross." Easy entertainment for those who prefer the sweet instead of bitter things in the theatre.

SHUBERT—"Katja." A musical comedy-operetta, with great stress laid upon the ludicrous side of things.

"KING OF THE AIR" FREE NORUMBEGA ATTRACTION

Cliff Curran, "King of the Air," will be the daily free attraction at Norumbega Park for two weeks beginning Saturday, when that outdoor recreation resort opens. Curren works at the top of a pole 98 feet from the ground, the pole being but 1½ inches in diameter at the top. But Curran is not the only free attraction. In addition there are band concerts, a midway, which features the better type of amusements, canoeing, boating, swings for children, and a carefully equipped playground for the youngsters. The theatre, largest outdoor playhouse in New England, will offer four star vaudeville acts, beside a feature film, a comedy reel and a news weekly.

New Copley Play

"The Ghost Train," which ends its run at the Copley next Saturday night, after 22 weeks, will be succeeded by "The Solitaire Man," a new melodrama in three acts, written by Bella Cohen and Samuel Spewack.

Ruth in Final Plea for Sympathy

Later, when my Loraine was born, I saw in his love for his grandchild a beautiful feeling that he had never exhibited to his own children.

I write this not in any spirit of reproach. He was a kind, good father and husband. But he rarely fondled or caressed me. My mother made it up, though. If ever a wretched sinner had a wonderful, loyal, true-blue mother, I have. And I repaid her with disgrace, grief and a brand.

I was a sickly, pale youngster. At nine I suffered a severe sunstroke and was out of my head for days. At six I had an internal operation and at twelve I was operated on for appendicitis and several times thereafter due to the effects of an unskilled surgical job. I graduated from Public School No. 11, at 13, with a fair grade record.

We were rather out at the heels, so I went immediately to work. I was a good-sized girl and easily passed for 18, which was the required age at the telephone company's employment bureau. I was run through a three-weeks' training course and then went into the Audubon exchange as a relief operator, nights. What with illness and the confinement and late hours, I didn't have much fun at this period when a girl most yearns for it.

By the time I was 15, a trained and unusually good phone girl, earning $15 a week, which was "top" for the work, I started with a business institute and took up stenography and typewriting, continuing on the job, also, the while.

After six months of this, the school landed me a position in a real estate office on 149th street, near where we were then living, as general office assistant to the realtor, whose name, I believe, was Smyth. I did bookkeeping, correspondence, and tended the office when he was out. He treated me very decently, but the salary was low. So I answered ads.

My first downtown position was as a typist to take the place of a girl on her vacation, with the Montague Hat Company. They seemed to like me, for I was held on after the other girl returned. I was ambitious to become a sure-enough secretary, which was the height of my business dreams.

LIVED QUIETLY

Otuside business hours, I lived very quietly. I taught Sunday school in the Methodist Episcopal Church of the Intercession, which I had attended with fair regularity since childhood. It was at 157th Street and Broadway. I was nothing to shout about as an instructor of the youth in spiritual matters but I read the children Bible stories and always felt better for doing my bit in the church, though within myself my religious promptings were very mild, almost absent.

My folks did not urge religion on me. They were church-goers, and so was I. We never said grace at the table.

At about this time I began to be interested in boys. Not very deeply, mind you. I liked them as sort of brothers. I cannot remember a love affair of any description worthy of that word until I met Albert Snyder and that wasn't love, either.

I who have since learned what love truly is, look back and say that Judd Gray was the first and the only man I ever loved. He was the one. Unfortunately, he was one too many.

I was still a sickly kid at 18, sallow, without physical resistance, subject to the now famous fainting fits, which, it is true, have an epileptic cause. I did not tell my own lawyers of this.

VAIN AND PROUD

It would have been a very strong point in my defense, I am told. I was too vain and proud. I didn't want to be painted as a freak or an invalid, and the word "epileptic" has a ghastly, sickening sound.

I inherited it from my father, who died of it five years ago. The night that I was convicted I had seven attacks.

I tried athletics in my youth, but I ran out of wind easily. I played at tennis but never went far with it. I belonged to a girls' club and learned to dance. Dancing was decried in our church, but I didn't bother much over that. We used to give hops and charge admission and use the profits for theatre parties.

I had several puppy-love proposals, none of them serious. I never flirted or touched a drop of anything intoxicating at this period. It wasn't stylish those days, and, besides, I never craved alcoholic drinks anyway. The dancing had no sex significance then. My heart was untouched. I lived an unromantic, simple existence. My mother frowned if I saw any one boy oftener than once a week.

I was past 18 when I got a position with the Tiffany Studios. I operated the switchboard among other duties. One day I was asked to call a number and I got a wrong connection. A man on the other end bawled me out roundly. Then he cooled down and called me back to apologize.

On such slim, slender threads hang our whole lives.

The man was Albert Snyder!

He got into conversation with me, and offered me a position with the magazine organization he worked for, then as art editor of Motor. I came downtown and sent my name in to Mr. Schneider, as he then called himself. I don't even remember that he impressed me enough for me to notice the color of his hair.

LOST JOB

He took me inside and got me a position, not working directly for him. I was a script reader and copyist and by the time I had a fair idea of what that was all about, I lost my position because of a change of system, making each magazine unit responsible for its own scripts. I was never Snyder's stenographer. I worked several months in the same office with him, but not, as many may have pictured, his personal private secretary. I sat in a big, open room where everyone could see what everyone was doing.

Snyder evinced a decided interest in me from the first. He would stop at my desk on every occasion when he passed through the room and made many when he didn't have to on business. He was 32 years old and I was 19.

He had an easy approach. The first day that I was in the office, on the job, he came up behind me and toyed with my hair, which, at that time, was thick and coiled high on my head. And he invited me to go with him to the Kit Kat Ball, a rather wild annual affair of artists and stage people.

I declined.

It was after I had left the magazines that Snyder began to show serious intentions. He telephoned me several times daily to where I had my new position, with the Rusling Wood Company, at No. 218 William street, and would come downtown to take me to lunch, and often to take me home. I began to like him.

He proposed to me the week before Christmas. I did not accept him. On my twentieth birthday I invited him to my party at home. He brought me a pound box of chocolates. I remember thinking it was a rather shabby gift from the man who was pressing me to marry him. But when I opened it I found inside it a jeweler's little box and in that a diamond solitaire.

It represented a fortune as values went in my life. I think it had as much as any one thing to do with my consenting. I wouldn't have given that ring up for anything after once I had it on my hand. I didn't know much then about what counts in this life.

I felt, moreover, that I was at a stage when I should step off on my own. So we were engaged from March 27 to July 24, when we were married in my home by Pastor Young. I was sick at the time and had taken an overdose of quinine and I felt wretched. I was too ill for any honeymoon journey, or any honeymoon at all. My husband went home to his bachelor apartment an hour later for the night.

TO NEW HOME

Next day he came and took me to our new home, on 61st street, Brooklyn, which my father had given me as a wedding gift. My people put us on our feet. My husband scarcely had a dollar in the world. I had made all the curtains and many other furnishings, and my mother gave us our furniture and other household equipment.

As I look back on that first night in my own home, with my husband, I see so clearly how the inevitable tragedy was born right then.

I was an unawakened girl. I had always thought that marriage must bring with it wonderful joys, thrills, a sense of almost divine satisfaction. For me it brought a stunning and numbing realization that I had made a frightful mistake.

From almost the first, my husband was cold, indifferent, occupied with every other interest except me. Sometimes when I put my arms around him, early in our union, too, he actually repulsed me and pushed me away. At other times, when I held myself away from him because of his conduct, he would scold me bitterly and say I had no affection, that I was a chunk of ice and that he had married a cold-blooded shell of a woman with nothing inside

If ever two poor human creatures were mismated, it was Albert Snyder and I.

I had looked to marriage to open doors of pleasure and contentment. Both were denied me far beyond what I had known in my own humble existence under my parents' roof.

I had fondly dreamed of babies.

That subject was the rock on which my whole life was wrecked.

In tomorrow's chapter I shall go into this.

This is the only true and authorized story of my life.

One Behind Record

By Nick Flatley

TUNNEY PAYS NO ATTENTION TO KNOCKING

LOTS of the boys say harsh things about Gene Tunney, heavyweight champion, but Gene is quite a citizen just the same. He isn't afraid to say what he thinks, and he doesn't pay any attention to the knocking and the popping. Gene was picked to elevate boxing to a high level. The sport had become a big business, and it was voted that the biggest man in it should be a shining example.

The Tunney advisers thought that a smooth, well-spoken youth, who knew that an oyster fork was not a tooth pick, would make a hit with the dear old public. Gene was sent to bat, so to speak, with George Bernard Shaw and other literati. He was dragged into view wrapped up in a claw hammer uniform and a two-gallon hat. It is reported that Billy Gibson, one of the managers, insisted on a monocle, but the good-natured champ had to draw the line somewhere

Nick Flatley

All this was broadcast, as things about new champs are. It made no hit whatever with the aforesaid public. The boys like their fighters tough. They could not envisage the heavy champ as a social butterfly. So they started yelling for Jack Dempsey, the same Jack they used to pan so merrily.

Tunney is unpopular, but he doesn't deserve it. He's a happy, normal American, who takes his business, fighting, seriously. He isn't going to be dethroned easily. He has been in constant training for six or seven years. He hasn't a bad habit. And he can fight much better than one would gather from reports about him.

He watched Jack Sharkey administer an artistic lacing to Jim Maloney the other night. He comes right out to admit that Jack looked like a serious threat, a real scrapper. He says he thinks he will beat Jack, and he thinks that way. But he doesn't try to belittle the opposition he's going to face

Tunney has been the quietest of all heavyweight champs—so far as saying things sensational go. He never was a chatterer, and winning a title doesn't change him a bit. Winning it, by the same token, will not make Jack Sharkey mum, either.

The chap who doesn't change when unexpected fortune comes along will usually be found there or thereabouts for quite a time afterward.

RUTH HAS FINE CHANCE TO BREAK MARK

GEORGE HERMAN RUTH is only one home run back of his 1921 record. The big boy has a fine chance to give that mark a real battle. His usual trouble has been at the start, but this year he's away almost as well as he wanted to be. And the Babe wasn't in good hitting shape this Spring

He will improve his eye and swing when the hot weather comes, and roll himself and his batting average up with the leaders. The surge of Lou Gehrig, his teammate, has helped the Babe. The pitchers have discovered that passing the Bam to take a chance with Columbia Lou is like switching from arsenic to prussic acid as a cure for the blues.

The boys take a chance with George Herman once in a while, and so he's getting his share of long hits. The excitement of over-ocean flights and heavyweight fights has taken a bit of attention off the eminent swatter these last few weeks, but you will find Ruth leading the thrill news when June and sunshine arrive

Other heroes flash spasmodically, and subside. The Babe, like the well, brook, keeps rolling along

They don't come any better

I DIDN'T know it, but Prince Albert was just the tobacco I had been looking for all the time. I hate to think of the time we lost getting together. But let that go. We're all set now—me and the pipe and P.A. We've been pals from the very first puff.

I had a hunch I was going to like P.A. the minute I got that breath of Nature's noblest gift to pipe-smokers. What a treat! It made me think of a hike through the woods, when the trees and the vines are in full leaf. I found the taste "as advertised" by the aroma.

Cool as a customs-inspector. Sweet as the thought you have nothing to hide. Mild as a milk-shake, yet with that full-bodied flavor that satisfies your smoke-taste right down to the ground. That's Prince Albert, Fellows. They don't come any better.

No matter how set you appear to be on a smoke-program, try P.A. I give you my word, no other tobacco that ever came down the pike ever brought so much downright satisfaction out of a pipe. "That fellow knew his groceries," you'll say, or words to that effect.

P. A. is sold everywhere in tidy red tins, pound and half-pound tin humidors, and pound crystal-glass humidors with sponge-moistener top. And always with every bit of bite and parch removed by the Prince Albert process.

Why is it that ONE GIRL will Attract practically ALL MEN, And another, NO MEN, and a few just ONE MAN?

WHAT ATTRACTS one CLEVER man will Attract ALL clever men and most STUPID ONES. That is, INTELLIGENCE, Plus charm, plus youth or BEAUTY.

A girl with NONE of these QUALITIES Naturally attracts NO ONE. For the Clever man and the FOOL can see NOTHING in her.

She who ATTRACTS one man may have HIDDEN CHARMS. If these are DISCOVERED by A GENTLEMAN she will flourish and live, but Many grow SOUR and FADE. Ah, men! Be GENTLE!

The Deep-Rooted Causes of a Backache

By Chas. A. L. Reed, M. D.
Former President of the American Medical Association

ARE you sometimes bothered with backache?

Of course, there are hundreds of causes of backache and the way to get rid of one is to get rid of its [illegible] in the particular [illegible]

[illegible] a few facts relative to backs and [illegible] in general that everybody ought to understand.

The upright position of which man is so proud has been evolved through millions of years, from the prone position of the lower mammals.

Man has [illegible] had to pay the penalty for this distinction in an inherent weakness of structure at the junction of the spine and pelvis.

This is the weakest point in his skeleton, first, because it is the meeting point of a fixed part and a moving one and secondly, because it is at the junction of two curves, the forward curve of the hollow of the back and the backward curve of what evolution has left of the "tail" bone.

And [illegible] the responsibility for transmitting the weight of the trunk, arms and head to the legs. It is not surprising that [illegible] gives way under the strain [illegible] in the lower back which are so common.

The normal sacrum, the wedge-like bone between the "tail bone" and the spine proper, has a broad upper surface [illegible] beneath the lowest of the sections of the spine [illegible] serves as a platform [illegible] can rest. In some people, however, this platform [illegible] forward instead of upward, and so the last lumbar vertebra, or the lowest section of the spine, has a constant tendency to slide forward and downward. This puts a great strain on the muscles of the back and causes them to ache.

Speaking generally, the human trunk is growing shorter and a survey of the skeletons of millions of years shows that from having six lumbar vertebrae we now have only five, and that some specimens more advanced than the mammal have only four, the others having been incorporated into the sacrum. In some people, the last lumbar vertebra is only imperfectly joined to the sacrum, or has a joint on one side and not on the other. This is a malformation that causes pain. The surgeon may complete what nature has begun and join the two parts properly.

Other imperfections of the spine are dissimilarity of the two joints on the lowest vertebra, and overlarge lumbar processes which are bony projections from the vertebrae. Sometimes these jam together, and the pain is only relieved by whittling away the bones under the anaesthetic.

You can see from this glance at conditions just what a deep meaning may be attached to backaches and how important it is to have a persistent backache thoroughly investigated by your physician.

Gracious Act Brings Lasting Joy

"Won't you just talk a bit to [illegible]" she asked. "Days seem so [illegible] [illegible] And [illegible] the [illegible] out of the [illegible] springlike [illegible] window. Why, I [illegible] fifty years ago—"

And she told me of a Spring day when she was twenty. A [illegible] century had [illegible] since then. Years bringing her love and light and laughter. And pain.

Taking [illegible] of those [illegible] Taking her [illegible] and [illegible] and her [illegible] thing but her courage.

And now she was a patient in the charity ward and she never again would see the green mists of Spring [illegible] the trees or the [illegible] [illegible] For one day soon they would take her from the charity ward to the [illegible] on the [illegible] where white stones go marching in a vast loneliness.

And all she wanted, little, tired, old thing, was [illegible] was someone to talk [illegible]

And I wondered as I sat there, with a hurt in my throat how many others of her there are [illegible] charity wards all over our land whose eyes would light so if someone came in just to talk a bit.

We who live all wrapped up in ourselves, driven by our travel cares slaves to ambition [illegible] to give up because the going [illegible] is hard—why don't we give a few minutes of our time once in a while to folks like her?

Visit the charity wards—there are so many of them. Take a bunch of flowers to brighten some lonely soul with feet already upon that long, long way we all must travel. Take a few oranges or a magazine to make endless days seem less endless.

And above all, take the willingness to "talk a bit." A little friendliness means so much to one cut off from life.

It isn't only that we will be doing a gracious thing for those who need it so. We also will be conferring a great benefit upon ourselves acquiring a new viewpoint upon our crowding lives.

Try it and see.

Good Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

IS it possible to make a great sacrifice of personal joy—to give up what would seem life's best gift—and still be happy?

Brown Eyes has found the answer to this question in her own experience.

"Dear Miss Fairfax," she writes: "About a year ago I met a young man whom I learned to love very dearly. My love was returned. I had been going with him for several months when one evening he told me he was a married man and the father of a little son. He was not living with his wife, as they could not get along.

[illegible]

"One evening I asked him to take his wife back and start all over again for the boy's sake. At first he would not hear of it. He told me I could not love him or I would not ask him to do such a thing.

"I [illegible] always live [illegible] But it was for the boy I [illegible] After two long months he told me he would take her back, not for her sake, but for the boy's and mine.

"My friends tell me it is the worst thing I could have done, as this man is miserable, but will keep his promise because he loves me. But I haven't a real feeling in my heart any more. My friends cannot understand how I can be happy—how I can go about and laugh just as though nothing had happened—when I have lost so much.

"BROWN EYES."

YOU have found the secret of happiness, dear Brown Eyes, happiness which [illegible] be taken from you. [illegible] her husband back to a wife. You gave a new ideal of duty and service to the man who loved you. For that reason, you are at peace and your thoughts are harmonious, which means you are happy.

Chapter 43

Now that Jacqueline was definitely gone, Tom Ware began slowly to move about in the mental fog that surrounded him. Turning away from the window, he was struck with the inconsequential realization that in her going she had left nothing behind to remind him that she had ever been there—no clothing, no toilet articles none of the usual feminine relics of desertion . . . nothing.

Tomorrow, he remembered, he must cancel their two steamship reservations for the European trip. Also, he supposed it would be necessary to call at her apartment, pay the rent, and arrange to have the [illegible] in her name against the [illegible] of her return . . . [illegible] sadness, the arrangements for [illegible]

Again and again he was assailed with the mystery of Jacqueline's conduct. The whole thing was like a dream, a [illegible] solid [illegible] A conviction [illegible] upon him [illegible] asked, decidedly, a [illegible] As yet, however, he realized that he was not thinking clearly, that he was still too numb from shock to plan out any course of action.

No one, he reflected, would be able to give him much help. Not even Godfrey Dixon, or Stanley Ware, his brother, [illegible]

The decision to keep his marriage a secret, now, appeared wise. His purpose had been to dispense with the objectional, though well meant, advice that surely would have [illegible] upon him [illegible] brother or Dixon that he [illegible] marrying a [illegible] girl. Later, after the wedding was an accomplished fact, they would have, of course, decently [illegible] A confession, with the [illegible] that he had been deserted [illegible], would bring him into a position of ridiculous [illegible]. Godfrey Dixon, [illegible] and rotund, would lean back [illegible] chair and chuckle joyously [illegible] shakings, like [illegible] gelatine, throughout the [illegible] of his torso.

[illegible] brother, of course, would ridicule the idea that Jacqueline was on [illegible] from that quarter there [illegible] be neither help nor understanding. Godfrey Dixon, sensitive [illegible] might possibly understand the marriage, despite its [illegible] had been something more than an act of sheer [illegible] [illegible] a friend's [illegible] these digressions of thought [illegible] were leading him [illegible]. The truth was, for the present he had no impulse beyond sitting in a great tapestried chair and smoking endless cigarettes. Later on he would be able to think more clearly, to get into action and, inevitably, to suffer; but just now, the shock that was upon him had the effect of a merciful anesthetic.

A [illegible] he began to seep through his brain, and [illegible] with common [illegible] might have been a great deal more considerate to Jacqueline in those last minutes. The sarcasm, at least, might have been spared. But, [illegible] all, he had been stung to the quick, and now, sitting there alone, the emptiness in his heart constituted a restless, sorrowful ache that was gradually, by the minute, growing more intense. After all, he had loved her—loved her now—more than anything expressable in mere words.

"Something was on her mind that turned her almost crazy," he told himself. "I'm sitting here pitying myself. God knows what's happened to her! God, what a fool I was . . . the poor kid . . . the poor kid . . . ."

Baffled and mystified one conviction grew to a certainty in his mind. Jacqueline, whatever the circumstances was absolutely on the level. This, more heartening than any fact in his consciousness, seemed to [illegible] like a star in the night . . . a star that he [illegible] and out of the lethargy of sorrow [illegible]

"Book binder? I don't know any book binders," Tom Ware said absently.

"Oh, yes sir, the man you sent for to look over the books. He called this afternoon when you were out and left before you returned. The lady, your wife—said to send him up."

A sudden sting of attention awakened all of Tom's faculties [illegible] [illegible] "What sort of a looking man was [illegible]"

"Very tall and powerful, sir, very dark. I should say he looked more like a sporting gentleman, sir, than a tradesman [illegible]"

Humans and Gorillas

By Garrett P. Serviss
Noted Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest.

A "HAUNTED HOUSE" doesn't look like ordinary houses to the eye of the imaginative spectator, for the "ghosts" lend it a moral atmosphere of dread and mystery.

So the "gorilla country" in Africa, impressive photographs of which have been published in connection with the story of the late Carl Akeley's explorations, seems to have a peculiar aspect curiously suited to the homeland of the monstrous ape that has given it a name.

Somehow the country, as shown in these pictures, recalls its strange and formidable inhabitant. It is, apparently, a land difform, its face distorted by unusual freaks of geological forces that have thrown it into a chaos of crowded, dome-shaped heights, enclosing deep, branching, steep-sided valleys whose bottoms as well as the slopes and tops of the thronging mountains are mantled with a rich bosky covering of trees and undergrowth that imparts a high degree of picturesque beauty to the rugged scene.

But the name, "gorilla country," has a haunting effect upon the mind while one looks at the pictures. Natural history contains no more formidable word than gorilla, which, since the time, now some sixty-six years ago, when Paul du Chaillu first made the name of the great mysterious beast of the dark African forest popularly known, has continued to excite a kind of shuddering interest.

The descriptions that he gave of the terrible creature, made in awful caricature of the half-developed human form, advancing out of the gloom of the woods, its huge hairy hands beating thunderous sounds from its drum-like chest, while its immense face was distorted with rage as it uttered roars that might be heard three miles off, have shaped the popular idea of the gorilla ever since.

The thirst for scientific knowledge alone makes welcome the fact that the blood of the gorilla is chemically akin to the blood of man and that this monstrous being can trace his origin back to a point of common ancestry.

But man struck, or was guided into, the true upward path of evolution, while the gorilla's fathers and their offspring had to remain forever beast-like.

It was not given to them to spread over the world, but they must stay in their own country, where at last their brilliant "cousin" in blood has found them out to furnish filling for library shelves and exhibits for museums.

To Clean White Fur

Furs soon become soiled during the damp days of Winter. But there is no reason why they should be worn in a dirty condition, as they may be cleaned at home with every degree of success. White furs, such as ermine, should be cleaned with calcined magnesia, and, as the operation is liable to make a room dusty, it is advisable to execute the cleaning out of doors. The furs should be placed on a clean sheet and sprinkled with the powder. It should then be gently rubbed the way of the fur with a piece of flannel until the fur is clean. The powder is removed by gently shaking the fur, and the process is completed by giving a careful rubbing with a soft dry cloth.

IT was evident to Cora, who was spending her vacation across the street, that Aunt Minnie was again [illegible] She was planning [illegible] of her [illegible] Aunt Janie who [illegible] fingers four [illegible] that Aunt Minnie [illegible] moved [illegible], and she remembered [illegible] early of her [illegible] had been declared [illegible] of the world. Oh, if the worm would only turn!

Now that Aunt Janie's husband and Grandma were both deceased, it would seem that the twins really needed each other, but again moving preparations were under way.

Waiting until Aunt Minnie went out, Cora ran across the street. She found little Aunt Janie drooping in Grandma's big rocker.

"What's up?" the girl asked cheerily.

Aunt Janie tried to smile. "Today [illegible] I think Minnie's grown tired of me again," she said. "She's selling the house and renting an apartment by the month. [illegible] another [illegible] to visit her there."

"Oh, the [illegible] is [illegible]," Cora [illegible] that Uncle Jack's [illegible]."

"Yes, and Eleanor is wealthy, too," Aunt Janie replied listlessly.

"Poor Aunt Janie [illegible] day I'll be making enough [illegible] in apartment [illegible] from the [illegible]."

"You're a dear, honey, but an old lady is always a burden."

Aunt Janie's thin hands fluttered nervously in her lap. "I guess Minnie got all the [illegible]," she said.

Suddenly Cora's eyes [illegible]. "I believe there is a way to defeat Aunt Minnie at her own game. Will you promise to do just as I tell you?"

Aunt Janie nodded. Obeying was the easiest thing she did.

That night Cora dispatched a special delivery to her uncle's wife. Four days later bursting with news she beckoned Aunt Janie to meet her on the lawn. The [illegible] in [illegible] crossed the street gingerly and sat upon the rustic [illegible], her [illegible] side.

"Aunt Eleanor is coming to stay with me here before Aunt Minnie gets settled in the apartment," Cora said. "She's anxious to visit Uncle Jack's birthplace. Mrs. Brown has room for you, too."

"What are you trying to do, Cora?" Aunt Janie asked wanly.

"Never mind [illegible]. You promised to obey. Now don't say a word to Minnie."

Cora found Aunt Eleanor as charming and [illegible] as her childhood [illegible] told her she would be. The [illegible] the girl noted with satisfaction that Aunt Minnie was in the throes of moving and that her temper was at its worst. When the house had reached its final state of disorder, she sent Aunt Janie over to announce a caller and with Aunt Eleanor followed immediately. As the two stepped upon the porch, the high pitched voice of Minnie reached their ears.

"You are the craziest little fool! I don't pay any more attention to you than I do to a mosquito. What fool woman are you bringing over to see me, you and that idiotic Cora? I won't see her—that's all."

"Let's go," whispered Cora and she led Eleanor back across the street. When Aunt Janie returned she was unruffled. "Minnie is so sorry, but it is impossible for her to see anyone now."

That evening, however, Minnie crossed to Cora's boarding house curious to know who the refused caller could be. Cora found her face an interesting study when she saw Aunt Eleanor, but she could not help admiring the speed with which their caller recovered her composure. There were tears in Minnie's eyes as she folded in her arms her [illegible]-in-law.

"Oh, Eleanor," she sobbed, "sorrow sweetens and endears. When I heard the sad news, I solemnly pledged—God helping me—to do all in my power to make up to you for your great loss."

It seemed to Cora that Eleanor, though gracious, was unimpressed while Minnie continued to lead the conversation into pious channels.

"And what are your plans, my dear Eleanor?" Aunt Minnie asked.

"Nothing definite yet. I have sold my home and I shall travel for a time—with a companion I presume."

Minnie executed a saintly smile, but her eyes snapped greedily. "When we remember that all the way the Lord leads us," she said, "we do not need to plan a day ahead."

Cora felt rather easy in her mind about the outcome of her strategy, but on second thought she decided it might be well to recount to Aunt Eleanor the many moves and to hint at the motives behind them.

"Aunt Janie is the sweetest thing," she concluded, "all her life Aunt Minnie has ruled her with a rod of iron."

"Perhaps some day the worm will turn," Eleanor suggested.

"Never," Cora replied, "unless someone else does the turning."

With remarkable expedition Minnie's apartment was put in order and Eleanor was invited to move over. Cora became a trifle uneasy when she found how willingly Aunt Eleanor accepted the fact that the invitation had been pushed up. Was it possible that Eleanor had been blind to Aunt Minnie's true character? Consequently, when Minnie invited Aunt Janie and Cora to supper on the first night after Eleanor's move, the girl was rather disturbed.

All evening Aunt Minnie was her sweetest self and Cora her most miserable. Aunt Janie was as usual quiet as a mouse. Why did she always let her twin sister occupy the centre stage? Quite early Cora feigned a headache and rose to go.

"You mustn't," Eleanor protested, "for I have some news. I'm so happy to see Minnie comfortably settled in this lovely apartment, and I was glad to hurry up my visit a bit, for Janie and I are sailing in two weeks for a Winter in Italy. I had to have someone with me, you know, and Janie was good enough to say she would go."

Cora felt herself stagger against the door, but she did not forget to search Aunt Minnie's face. For just a second it was dark with hatred, but quickly she summoned her smile.

"That's lovely," the baffled one declared, "I have always believed that the Lord intended my work to be here in the home vineyard."

But to Cora the triumph possessed two disquieting aspects; she knew that Aunt Minnie thought herself a martyr and that Aunt Janie's conscience hurt her in accepting alone her good fortune. If only the worm had turned of its own accord—but she knew that worms really aren't made so that they can turn.

MEDBURY SAYS---

By JOHN P. MEDBURY

SEVERAL married men in Chicago have formed a Husband Protective Association. They're trying to organize a five day week in the home.

THEY claim that a man is entitled to Saturday and Sunday off for good behavior.

THIS league is working hard. They're endeavoring to put marriage on a friendly basis.

THERE are only two classes of people that have given matrimony a bad name. Men and women.

IN spite of divorces being so easy to obtain, a lot of couples can't seem to get enough of them.

THE organization is trying to bring back the good old days when one wedding would last a man a whole lifetime.

IN the last few years, people are getting married on Saturdays and divorced on Monday.

THE only reason they stick together that long is that the courts are closed over the week-end.

IT'S too bad they don't convene on Sunday morning to accommodate the tourists.

OF course we can't imagine what some women go through, but most of them go through their husband's pockets.

BY instructing a man to leave his salary at the office, this new association hopes to cut down the number of pay-roll robberies.

ANY man has a right to take three or four dollars out of his wages if he's big enough.

THIS is a free country even if you do have to pay fifty cents to visit the Statue of Liberty.

MARRIAGE, however, is very popular in America. We have three million bachelors who are in favor of it.

THIS Husband's Protective Association has the sanction of the United States government and they are working directly under the war department.

THE MEDITATIONS OF A WIFE---BY HELEN ROWLAND

TURNING a bachelor into a husband is the greatest feat of the average woman's life.

* * *

If only the girl who contemplates performing this modern miracle could interview his landlady, his mother, or the maid who takes care of his apartment, before taking the vital step, she might acquire a little working knowledge of her life-job that would save her many shocks and prevent at least one husband-shooting.

* * *

She might find out, for instance, whether he pays his rent regularly or takes it out in applesauce, bluffing or stalling.

* * *

What time he comes in at night, what time he gets up in the morning, and whether or not his apartment is deserted over the week-end.

* * *

How many feminine telephone calls he has and if the neighbors complain of the noise in his apartment after 11 P. M.

* * *

How much ventilation he requires at night, and whether he throws back the bed-clothes or just leaves them in a lump in the morning.

* * *

Whether he leaves his pajamas in the middle of the floor and the water in the bath-tub, and where he throws the soiled bath-towels.

* * *

Whether he is addicted to patent medicines or to morning exercises and what he does with his cigarette ashes and his old razor blades.

* * *

How many moth-eaten sweaters and weather-beaten hats he keeps hanging around, and how large the holes are in his socks.

* * *

Whether he is satisfied with safety-pins in place of buttons in his underwear, or is he the meticulous kind who carefully hangs his cravats in a row and places boot-trees in his bed-slippers. ((Oh, the psychology of that!)

* * *

If he is "fussy" about not having things moved around on cleaning day and forever suspicious of "missing" something.

* * *

What he eats for breakfast and how long it takes to get him to the table.

* * *

Whether he tips liberally and leaves money lying around carelessly, or is always "hard-up" and asking for a "loan."

* * *

If he wipes his shoes on the soiled towels or uses the table-runner to polish his golf sticks.

If he regards the waste-basket as a receptacle—or just as a target.

* * *

If he burns the furniture with his cigarette stubs, scratches it with his boot-heels and leaves wet glasses on the mahogany.

* * *

Not that any or all of these things would deter a woman from marrying the man she loves, but that a foreknowledge of them would give her a working basis on which to start the "Cure," or the "Reform," which every woman sub-consciously thinks she is going to effect on the man she marries!

* * *

It is not a man's occasional sins that drive a woman to murder or divorce—it is his little daily habits! Why shoot your husband?

Use Cuticura Soap And Ointment To Heal Sore Hands

FOR Sour Stomach PHILLIPS' Milk of Magnesia

Hereafter instead of soda take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach and relief will come instantly.

Better Than Soda

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. Besides, it neutralizes acid, gently urging this souring waste from the system without purging. It is far more pleasant to take than soda.

Try a 25c Bottle

Insist upon "Phillips." Twenty-five cent and fifty cent bottles, any drugstore. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Charles H. Phillips Chemical Company and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

FARMER WOMAN IN OKLAHOMA

Praises Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Because It Gave Her Health and Strength

In a sunny pasture in Oklahoma, a herd of sleek cows was grazing. They made a pretty picture. But the thin woman in the blue checked apron sighed as she looked at them. She was tired of cows, tired of her tedious work in the dairy. She was tired of cooking for a houseful of boarders, besides caring for her own family. The burdens of life seemed too heavy for her failing health. She had lost confidence in herself.

One day she began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and her general health began to improve. She took it faithfully. Now she can do her work without any trouble, sleeps well and is no longer blue and tired.

This woman, Mrs. Cora Short, R. R. 9, Box 387, Oklahoma City, Okla., writes: "Everybody now says: 'Mrs. Short, what are you doing to yourself?' I weigh 135 and my weight before I took it was 115. I have taken seven bottles of the Vegetable Compound."

Are you on the Sunlit Road to Better Health?

BULL MARKET HOPED FOR IN LOW ISSUES

By FRANK H. MELOON,
Financial Editor.

You have read that this is a "two-sided" market. If you have held some of the shares that have been declining, you knew the market was "two-sided." The "blue chip" shares, the so-called "rich men's issues," have ploughed upward, but so many stocks are now selling away below their highs that some brokers are beginning to wonder if it isn't about time for a bull market in some of them. It might be carried on while the present top inside of the list is reversing itself. Nobody knows.

Frank S. Davis was due back today from a tour of European ports, where, with Mrs. Davis, he has been working with steamship interests to increase Port of Boston business.

Mr. Davis is manager of the Maritime Association of the Boston Chamber of Commerce and his recipe for success seems to be to keep everlastingly hustling.

Another hustler for port business sails Thursday for Ostend to attend the Rotary convention. He is Maj. F. W. Hartford, publisher of the Portsmouth, N. H., Herald and also of the New Hampshire Gazette, known as the oldest newspaper in America, established Oct. 7, 1756. He will be gone several weeks.

William Whitman

Wall Street writer says: By virtue of his more than 70 years' connection with the New England cotton manufacturing industry, William Whitman well deserves the title of "The dean of New England mill men." A few days ago he quietly celebrated his 85th birthday.

At the age of 12 Whitman entered the employ of a wholesale dry goods concern in St. John, N. B. Two years later he began his affiliation of 71 years' duration with dry goods concerns, selling houses, cotton and woolen mills and other lines that were closely allied with the textile industry.

As long ago as 1867, when 25 years old, he became treasurer of Arlington Mills, a woolen enterprise. Mr. Whitman's later connections have been with cotton mills. Either as builder or manager or both, he has been interested in four of the largest units at New Bedford: Whitman Mills, Manomet Mills, Nonquitt Spinning Co. and Nashawena Mills, having a total of 900,000 spindles, or over a quarter of that city's 3,500,000 spindles. He has not been connected with Whitman Mills for some years. Perhaps his keenest interest lies in Nashawena, the largest fine cotton goods mill in the country.

Of course during his long career Mr. Whitman has witnessed the growth of practically the entire New England cotton manufacturing industry, and has seen this section change from a trading to industrial region. He has seen the South develop tremendously as a competitor to New England, but has invested none of his money there. Despite his many years, he still visits his Boston office daily, and has an active part in the management of his several mills, as well as William Whitman Co., the selling organization bearing his name.

Far be it from me to attempt to check up all the competing gasoline stations in Boston. Taking the largest as a criterion, however, the present price you pay of 17 cents a gallon is three cents under that a year ago, four cents under the highest price of 1926 and just the same as the lowest of 1926. It is two and one-half cents higher than the lowest in 1923, and 15 cents less than the price on January 1, 1921.

Cities That Have, Others Lacking Right Leaders

By B. C. FORBES

NEW YORK, May 24.—"The trouble with our city," said a visitor from a large Eastern city, "is that most of our leading citizens are less eager to progress themselves or to help the city to progress than they are concerned over trying to prevent others from getting further to the front than they themselves."

How is it in your community?

* * *

SOME cities are rich in public-spirited citizens. Other cities are not.

B. C. Forbes

Some cities are blessed with brainy men of affairs who succeed in building up successful enterprises that contribute to local growth. In other cities there is little aggressive leadership, no notable expansion, no energetic growth.

Many things enter into the rise or decay of a city. But, after all, much, if not most, depends upon the character, the calibre, the progressiveness of the more influential inhabitants. Humans are the mainspring of all progress and prosperity.

* * *

THE advancement of several cities in the Far West is due to their possession of very capable, forward-looking leaders who, while enterprisingly developing their own activities, take a genuine interest in contributing thought, effort and money to the wellbeing and betterment of their community.

Seattle is fortunate in this respect. Los Angeles is conspicuously so. San Francisco's leading banker is the head of its system of parks.

The New Orleans of today is a very different city from the New Orleans of some years ago. The improvement has been brought about by brainy, unselfish civic work on the part of local bankers and business men. Few cities in America have been so generously blessed in this respect.

Atlanta had its Asa Candler and, more recently, has been developing a gratifying number of public-spirited citizens who have contributed invaluably to developing the city's industrial, financial and commercial importance as well as its attractiveness.

Jacksonville is another Southern city fortunately circumstanced.

WHEN we come to metropolitan cities we find, in most instances, somewhat different conditions.

Within the last decade or more New York has developed a number of grand-scale philanthropists. But, somehow, New York multi-millionaires have a habit of bestowing their largesse on other places more often than on New York. Some of them might well take a leaf out of George Eastman's book; although he gave millions years ago to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, he has since showered noble gifts upon his home town, Rochester, N. Y. Happily, there does appear to be developing a little more inclination on the part of wealthy New Yorkers to do more for the metropolis.

CHICAGO has produced a few giants who have devoted money freely for worthy civic purposes, but the number has been small in proportion to the total multimillionaires created there.

Detroit has suffered severely from a dearth of local George Eastmans, notwithstanding that the city and its surrounding territory have witnessed the springing up of first-generation millionaires. There are now definite, encouraging signs that a better record will be established hereafter.

Philadelphia's showing has not been conspicuously praiseworthy. Jealousy has been more rife than rivalry in noble efforts for the benefit of the city. Here, also, however, a new day promises to dawn.

Boston gives the outsider the impression of being self-satisfied—probably because there has been less need there for dynamic civic leadership than there has been and is in most other places not so maturely developed.

* * *

The law of compensation is not asleep. A city dominated by self-seeking, mercenary citizens, animated by petty personal jealousies rather than by wholesome ambition and public-spiritedness, is doomed to become a less desirable place in which to live than a city enjoying broader-gauge, more forceful, more altruistic leadership.

clouds and the sleet began to cling to the plane."

He climbed over, and climbed under, with wonderful judgment, perfect success.

GEORGE H. McGOVERN and others suggest that it is time to stop referring to Captain Lindbergh as the "Flying Fool." That will probably occur to newspapermen generally.

THE RECORD shows that Lindbergh's Wright motor used less than twelve gallons of gasoline per hour of flying and did better than 100 miles to the hour. At twenty cents a gallon that means about $81 worth of gasoline, plus twenty gallons of oil. Not expensive for a trip to Paris.

Anybody who doubts that airplanes will carry passengers across the ocean for less than $50, "all daylight route," has little confidence in human ingenuity.

THIS NATION, and the rest of the world, have cause to regret the death of H. E. Huntington yesterday. This son of California was a good American. He spent his fortune intelligently for the finest books and works of art. And he gave his collections and the magnificent estate which contains them to the people of California.

No sane man grudges or envies a gigantic fortune to such a man as Huntington, who knew how to use money. The country honors him.

THE "Free Thinkers' Society" of New York plants a tree in Central Park in memory of Luther Burbank, praises him as a "free thinker" and denounces "theological hyenas" for vilifying him.

Burbank had a right to believe what he chose, and clergymen are not necessarily "theological hyenas" because they exercise their right to say what they think of what Burbank thought.

As a matter of fact, there is no FREE thinker. Our thoughts grow out of other men's thoughts as forests grow out of dead trees, long since fallen to the ground.

IN THE FALL "medicinal whiskey," Bourbon and Rye, made of corn and rye, will be manufactured under supervision of the Treasury Department. No whiskey should be suggested for medicinal purposes. If doctors say alcohol is necessary, they should use brandy made of grapes. Many poisons are in grain whiskey, even carefully made. Real brandy is free of poisonous oils and other poisons unless you call pure alcohol a poison.

Wood alcohol is deadly, potato alcohol is very poisonous, grain alcohol less poisonous, grape alcohol safest.

MUSSOLINI describes Lindbergh's flight well when he calls it "superhuman will taking space by assault." Progress and the conquest of space, which means conquest of the power of gravitation, have gone together.

ITALY WILL have a celebration of her own if Pinedo, who has flown to four continents, Asia, Africa, North and South America, to say nothing of Europe, "hops" back to Italy. He hopped off yesterday via the southern route across the Atlantic, first stop at the Azores, where volcanoes below the ocean threw up a landing place for men thousands of centuries before there were any men on the earth. Pinedo is expected to reach Rome later this week. Mussolini will be on hand to meet him when he steps from his plane.

BRITISH scientists say lead will prove to be the basis of cancer cure and believe the fight against cancer is largely a matter of finance and common sense. Beware of any mysterious lump.

CONSUMPTIVES will be interested to learn that physical work, even "hard work" in reason, is beneficial, not harmful, except in extreme cases.

Consumptives often have lungs that might be called "too good," the lung area being so great that the heart finds difficulty in pumping an adequate blood supply. Exercise in moderation strengthens the heart, helps the patient.

Unity of Purpose Among English-Speaking Peoples Can Organize the World for Peace

SUNDAY the purple hood of Doctor of Laws was placed around the shoulders of William Randolph Hearst, at Oglethorpe University, Atlanta, with the simple accolade:

> "William Randolph Hearst, counselor of millions, lover of America, exponent of a perpetual peace entente among the English-speaking peoples of the world."

The degree and title were a fitting reward for the crusade of English-speaking unity by Mr. Hearst and his papers, beginning with Mr. Hearst's stirring 1927 New Year's message calling on these nations of one tongue to pledge peace among themselves forever, and to stand together for peace in the rest of the world.

IN his baccalaureate address to the graduating class of Oglethorpe, Mr. Hearst paid his tribute to the healing power of common language:

> "The same races which speak different languages and live in conflict in Europe speak the same language and live in peace and harmony in America."

In the spread of the English language as the common speech of international trade and finance, Mr. Hearst sees a mighty force for peace. He said:

> "I firmly believe we will never realize universal peace in the world until we have what amounts to a universal language. This is a business age. Industry is enthroned. Finance is king. And English is the language of commerce and the counting room.
> "With a combination of English-speaking nations, the wide distribution of English-speaking peoples, English will soon become the universal language; or, at least, every nation will learn its own language first and English second, and the one language thus chosen to be used and understood throughout the world will be English."

THE political events of the year emphasize the common interests of America and the English-speaking dominions of the British Empire, and their need to stand together to protect those interests, the chief one being peace.

Above all, the English-speaking nations hold the money power of the world. By refusing to lend money to other nations for warlike purposes, as Herbert Hoover suggests, the sinews of war can be cut.

OGLETHORPE gave Mr. Hearst deserved encouragement in his campaign for English-speaking unity for peace. His work is a nucleus round which the world may yet be organized for peace in fulfillment of the age-long dream of humanity.

That Auditorium

When, Mr. Nichols?

Now that the fourth new Boston hotel is completed the Boston Evening American hopes Mayor Nichols will not wait for someone to come forward with a plan to build a Civic Auditorium, but will himself start the ball by calling a meeting of those citizens most likely to be interested.

His Honor can count upon the support of the railroads, the steamship companies, the hotel men and the merchants of this vicinity to begin with.

Funds for the original Convention Hall in Kansas City, which now seats 12,000 persons, were raised by POPULAR SUBSCRIPTION.

CLEVELAND'S Public Auditorium, with a like seating capacity, was first discussed seriously when Mayor Harry L. Davis called a meeting of business and professional men in 1916. This committee built a general organization, with a membership of more than 200,000. The campaign for a bond issue of $6,500,000 was begun at once.

The Municipal Auditorium at Springfield, in our own State, cost $2,000,000. It is said to have brought to the city more than $8,000,000 in business. The ANNUAL value of the hall in Kansas City, by the way, is placed at FOUR TIMES THE ORIGINAL COST OF THE STRUCTURE.

A recent addition to the Hotel Bellevue provides Boston with 100, the Ritz-Carlton with 350, the New Elks' with 350, the new Parker House with 690 and the Hotel Statler with 1,300 rooms.

These 2,790 bring Boston's equipment to a total of 16,000 rooms.

We now have everything even the largest convention can ask for EXCEPT A MEETING-PLACE.

Why delay?

A Civic Auditorium in Boston, besides providing accommodations for community gatherings, will house radio shows, flower shows, even three-ring circuses. It will be of benefit to all New England.

Here, Mr. Mayor, is YOUR opportunity to do something for the city that will be remembered always.

The hotel men having done their part—AT LEAST their part—the NEXT move is Boston's.

'How Much Is There in It?'

NOT the Question to Ask If What You Want Is Opportunity

This is the season when leading citizens, distinguished on one account or another, are invited to say a word to Those About to Be Graduated.

Sometimes, these talks are obscure and mysterious; too often they are taken from books and are flat to the point of dullness. Twaddle, moonshine and wish-wash are the ingredients.

But occasionally there comes along a speaker who has something to say, and who says it in words that are easily understood.

A recent speaker before a high school audience in Gloucester was Mr. Cameron Beck, whose interesting and important position is that of director of personnel of the New York Stock Exchange.

In the course of a year, Mr. Beck interviews THOUSANDS of youthful applicants for positions.

"Ninety-nine out of one hundred young men who come to me to apply for a position," he said, ask the same questions: "What does it pay? What are the hours?"

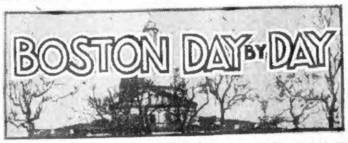
"The one hundredth applicant inquires, 'What are the opportunities?' "

The gentleman from New York left with his young hearers the picture of two groups of workers, the one large, the other small.

Members of the first group have no thought for anything except the pay-envelope, no eye for much besides the clock. These are they who fall by the wayside, or become "drifters."

Those who form the much smaller group are the young people who are looking ahead. They MOVE ahead of the other group, too, it may be almost imperceptibly at first but eventually by leaps and bounds.

Neither the stock exchange nor any other worthwhile employer has room in his organization for the clock-watcher.



WALSH PAINTING

STATE HOUSE guides are continually called upon to explain to visitors the absence from among the portraits of former governors, of DAVID I. WALSH. More than a year ago the portrait was received from the artist—EDMUND C. TARBELL—and set up temporarily in the council room. It was returned by the art commission with certain suggestions. Why the portrait has not made its reappearance is a mystery even to State officials in touch with the work.

AMUSED

CHARLEY TIGHE of the Harbor police, is amused daily at the appearance on a nearby wharf of an elderly man, rain or shine. He says the man on pleasant days sit facing the water when a younger man appears with the morning newspaper and sits by his side and reads to him the happenings of the day. This is followed by a short discussion, following which the younger man folds the newspaper and departs leaving the elderly man alone to enjoy a pipe.

TELEPHONE

CITY CLERK LEVERETT D. HOLDEN of Malden, the only city clerk which Malden has had, has another distinction, which is that of being the oldest telephone subscriber in point of service in the country. Mr. Holden had the first telephone ever installed in Malden outside the central office and manager, and was given No. 3. He always retained that number, which is now listed as 0003. He has retained constant telephone service since that day at his same address on Prescott street.

LIKES TOWN.

FRED HOFFMAN, Red Sox catcher, didn't take very long to get acquainted around Boston. FRED had a flier with the Yankees a few seasons back, but didn't like Gotham for a home. Then he had a season or two in the American Association, but the towns on that circuit weren't just like home either. Fred didn't like the idea of coming to a last place club this Spring but he made friends fast and furious in the HUB, and now he thinks it's the best town in U. S. A. He and ARTHUR CROWLEY, son of Superintendent Crowley of the police department, are great pals and FRED has more than one reason for winning a regular berth with BILL CARRIGAN'S sockers.

SERVED WITH O'BRIEN

At Portsmouth, N. H., the writer recently met EVERETT W. RICKER, who took a position in Boston City Hall back in the days of MAYOR O'BRIEN and labored there for 21 years. MR. RICKER is now a dealer in antique books. His father, JAMES W. RICKER, former Tax Collector of Boston, was at City Hall for 33 years.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS

WHEN Springtime wind comes roaring in from islands far away, it brings a breath of strangeness to the rose-crowned month of May. A something in the racing air brings Orient sweets today, as though it wafted round the world the fragrance of Cathay. It brings a hint of lily-buds upon a still lagoon, where painted lips and almond eyes make vows beneath the moon. It tunes the thoughts to temple bells and idols wrought of jade, fantastic shapes that lurk within the dim pagoda's shade. And, as the wind goes whirling on, wild, joyous, never still, it stirs desires and dreams . . . would I might rove the world at will! Would I might sail the sparkling seas, thread cities old and dim, and like Spring wind go dancing down beyond earth's utmost rim!

HUMAN AILMENTS IN LUXURY

By DR. FRANK CRANE

A GERMAN scientist who conducted autopsies on 30,000 mummies dating from 4000 B. C., to the dawn of the Christian Era, says he found abundant evidence that human ailments grow with luxury.

Mummies of an earlier age showed signs of few of the diseases that appeared in those of a later, richer time. Gravel on the kidneys, tuberculosis, gout, cancer and smallpox came with the ages of luxury.

Early Egyptians had hard, white teeth. Later ones, who by their costly burial robes showed they had lived in a time of greater wealth, had decayed molars.

The whole trend, according to this scientist, has always been to an increase in human ailments when there was an increase in luxury.

However, the point is that it was not the luxury that brought on the ailments, but a failure of the people to meet the changing conditions.

A change in outward circumstances has to be met with a change in bodily habits. Extinct animals are the ones who could not meet the changes in climate and food, who kept on as they had been going under other circumstances, and paid the penalty.

There is no reason why grandpa, who got callouses sitting on a hard board wagon-seat should be any healthier than little Eddie, who rides around on springs and shock absorbers.

Luxury, in itself, is a fine thing if it is used rightly.

The trouble with it is that too many people live in luxury as if they were living under the old conditions. They do not alter their habits to meet their new conditions.

They eat the same food grandpa did when he chopped wood and milked the cows, and they exercise as grandpa did when he had a few minutes to rest.

Consequently their aches and pains multiply and they blame it on luxury. The real villain in the piece is not luxury, but a continuation of habits that suited one condition into a sort of life that needs other habits.

Scientists, experimenting with rats, have shown that a life lasts according to the "rate" it is used. Rats using their energy in spinning a wheel fast day after day, died sooner than those which used less energy from day to day. So men living in an age which enables them to conserve their energy should be healthy and long-lived if they change their mode of living to fit their new conditions. In fact the best assurance for long life is the ability to change with things about you, to adapt yourself to altering circumstances. The security for long life is not found in enormous strength or in so-called appliances for safety.

The only thing safe for a man or a nation is to go on. Life is like riding a bicycle. Its safety consists in keeping straight ahead. Whenever anybody stops, all sorts of maladies begin to infest him. There have been mammoth animals dug up from the fossil beds of the past. They seemed to be admirably equipped for long life, but they have become extinct, while animals of less formidable construction with the ability to adapt themselves to changed circumstances still have their descendants with us.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

I HAVE a brilliant young friend named Leroy.

He is handsome and versatile. He has a marked talent for writing and unusual force and determination. In addition to this, he has received large gobs of choice education, most of which have stuck.

From which you would gather that Leroy is a valuable citizen and that the world is his, for the taking.

You'd gather wrong.

Leroy is a nuisance to himself and to everyone with whom he comes in contact, and unless he changes greatly he stands less chance of making good in life than a good husky stevedore or scavenger.

Leroy's life is a failure and his power is going to waste because he isn't insulated. Which is a lamentably common fault in these high pressure days.

We devise ways of making lives more powerful, but power is wasted —is indeed actually dangerous—unless it is properly insulated.

Look at the cord on your electric light.

Power goes through that cord, power which is of rare service to human life. But that power wouldn't be of service unless the wire which transmitted it were insulated by that woven covering. It would, instead, be a constant menace to life and property.

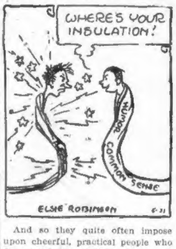
And that is what's the matter with many high voltage people.

They have power and intelligence but they lack the necessary insulation of humor and common sense to protect themselves and others against friction. So they become as irritating and destructive as "live wires." Instead of transmitting the force which is in them, they sting and shock those who come in contact with them, and are naturally avoided.

Such is Leroy's predicament, and that is why his life is being wasted in spite of his splendid endowment.

But surely it's easy to see and remedy a lack like that?

You'd think so. Yet, strangely enough, most uninsulated people refuse to remedy that lack. Instead they take a perverted pride in their condition. They protest that they are "sensitive" or "high strung."



And so they quite often impose upon cheerful, practical people who do not take life in the raw.

Why should they, with their rare talent, make such ignoble concession to the drab demands of life?

So they rationalize and glorify their edginess.

And all the while, their force and talent go to seed.

The world passes them by.

For the plain truth is that lacking the insulation of sense and humor and courteous restraint, the greatest genius becomes nothing but a common pest and the world soon tickets him with a "Hands Off!" sign.

Famous Actresses

—By Anne Chaplain—

Mary Robinson, "The Exquisite Perdita."

"YOU will make a conquest of the Prince tonight. I never saw you look so handsome as you do now."

These words, spoken to Mary Robinson by a fellow-actor as she was about to step on the stage before a royal audience, unfortunately turned out to be true.

Mary Darby, as she was known before her marriage, was the daughter of a captain of a whaler who lost his fortune in a scheme for converting Eskimo Indians. He then deserted his family, and Mary, who had been attending a fashionable school, had to come home to help make ends meet. She managed to get some pupils, at the same time not neglecting her own education. Every penny that could possibly be spared was hoarded to be used for the "cultivation of accomplishments." One of these was dancing, which she learned from the dancing master at Covent Garden.

Impressed by the beauty and cleverness of Mary, this dancing master brought her to the attention of Garrick, who took a great fancy to her and undertook her tuition. Thus trained by Garrick, Mary made her debut as Juliet. Old as he was, Garrick attended the opening and derived a great deal of pleasure and gratification from Mary's wonderful success.

Mary had been married to a man named Thomas Robinson, a clerk in London. At first they lived in comfort, but her husband lost his money and once was thrown into prison for debt. She accompanied him there and remained during his confinement. While there she completed a collection of verse which she had [illegible] as a child. It was later published in two volumes.

The loss of her husband's fortune was the deciding factor in Mrs. Robinson's decision to pursue a stage career. She was most beautiful and intelligent, possessing a grace and charm that endeared her to all. She played successfully in both comedy and tragedy.

One night in December, 1779, "A Winter Tale" was given "by command." The King and Queen with the royal family, were present. Mrs. Robinson was cast for Perdita, the part which was her undoing. She was so exquisitely beautiful that night that one of her fellow-actors was moved to make the remark first quoted.

During the entire performance the Prince of Wales (later George IV.) did not take his eyes off "Perdita." It was very evident that he was enthralled by her grace and loveliness. This resulted in an impassioned correspondence. The Prince wrote Mary long letters, declaring his undying love for his "Perdita" and signed himself her "Florizel." Mary could not resist the romantic pleading of the Prince, who was only eighteen years old. They met and later she left the stage for him. Poor Perdita's happiness was short-lived, however. The Prince tired of her after two years and she was left a pathetic figure without money or position.
